JAPS GET RUSSIAN REPLY; ENVOYS BELIEVED TO BE IN DEADLOCK ON PEACE

BARON KOMURA, ENVOY OF MIKADO.

SERGIUS WITTE, ENVOY OF THE CZAR.

Sato, Speaking for Both Sides, Announces That Japanese Response Will Be Delivered To-day or To-morrow---Believed It Will Be an Ultimatum to Russia.

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 12.—Russia and Japan to-day reached a crisis in their peace negotiations. There is now a general belief that Baron Komura, for the Mikado will hand an ultimatum to M. Witte, for the Czar, this afternoon. That may either bring quick peace, or more probably, longer war, it is thought.

This strained situation quickly followed Russia's reply to the Japanese peace terms, handed to Baron Komura at 10 o'clock to-day by M. Witte. It may be said on the statement of M. Witte himself that Russia found certain of the Japanese demands acceptable, but others she did not find so. Baron Komura now knows which Russia is willing to accept and which she will fight.

On the answer which Komura will make probably this afternoon to the Russian representations depends peace or war. The conference met promptly on time, and M. Witte handed over Russia's reply, then the conference adjourned, to meet this afternoon at 3, or possibly to-morrow afternoon at 3.

Mr. Sato based this statement at 10:40 to-day, by authority of both the Russian and the Japanese envoys.

"The meeting will be held either at 3 o'clock to-day or to-morrow at the same hour."

Baron Komura has received within the past twelve hours a great quantity of cable matter from Tokio. From nearly last evening until 2 o'clock it came in a constant stream to one operator; then two other operators were put on the work and the matter kept coming until late this morning.

"NOT TO DICTATE TERMS."

"Japan is not here to dictate terms; she is here to reach an agreement," said Mr. Sato to-day while diplomatically reading a direct question relative to the probable outcome of to-day's session of the envoys. He declined to comment upon the statement authorized last night by M. Witte, declaring that Russia proposed cession of territory and the payment of a war indemnity.

"If Russia declines to accept some of the Japanese conditions that question speculation, does it not?" he asked. His eye twinkled significantly and his shoulder shrug indicated that Japan had placed her terms high in order that the Russian envoys could have the pleasure and credit of beating them down.

ENVOYS MEET PROMPTLY.

M. Witte and Baron Rosen left the hotel Wentworth sharply at 9 o'clock to-day for the peace conference room at the navy yard. A few minutes later their big auto was followed by one in which Baron Komura and Minister Takahira were. Assistant Secretary of State Peirce followed in a third.

Sharply at 10 o'clock the envoys met in their room. Within a few minutes M. Witte had submitted Russia's

GRAND JURY SILENT ON BRIBE CHARGE BY LABOR CHIEFS

WARRANT NOW TO BE ASKED FOR PROSECUTION OF MARTIN RYAN.

In the report of the Suffolk Grand Jury to-day there is no mention made of the bribery charges brought by members of the Central Labor Union and Alderman Linehan in connection with the efforts of the Dock Trust to secure a franchise for railroad tracks in East Boston streets. The next Grand Jury does not meet until the first Monday in September.

That Martin Ryan, indirectly, through the Central Labor Union, attempted to influence the members of the Board of Aldermen, by the weight that the approval of the union might have with that body, is the basis upon which Thomas A. Mullen, counsel for President Peter W. Collins of the Central Labor Union will argue in the Municipal Court on Monday for the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of Ryan.

May Unseat Linehan.

"This is the only ground upon which we can hope to obtain the warrant," said Mr. Mullen to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "namely, that Mr. Ryan attempted to bribe Mr. Collins to secure the indorsement of the Central Labor Union, and in that way influence the vote of the aldermen on the track order."

Alderman Curley, heading the members of the board who were accused by Alderman Linehan of being bribed to vote for the National Dock Trust petition, is today intimating that, unless Linehan asks District Attorney Stingree for an investigation, the majority aldermen will, at Monday's meeting, unseat Linehan.

Alderman Linehan to-day says he does not care whether the Aldermen try to unseat him or not. He is not inclined to go to the courts, believing the people will pass the right judgment. He will not retract his charge.

May Be Boomerang, Says Ryan.

Martin H. Ryan is to-day suggesting that the charges against him may prove to be a boomerang, and hints at exposure which will shake up a lot of old dried bones.

Mr. Ryan says: "I have reason to believe that certain men did get money, and plenty of it, from the Dock Trust people by posing as labor men with influence."

Treasurer Burroughs of the Dock Trust, has told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that he has paid money to Ryan, and to others who have represented themselves as influential, but he says with the exception of Ryan's case the cash was expended for advertising in labor programmes, or similar things.

Corporation Counsel Babson, it is expected, will decide which of the two votes at last Monday's meeting of the Aldermen is legal. One sustained the Mayor's veto by 8 to 3; the other overruled it by 10 to 1.

RUHLIN HAD TO WORK TO BEAT M'CORMICK

IT TOOK THE AKRON GIANT 18 ROUNDS TO WIN A VICTORY.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—James J. Jeffries may slumber peacefully. He will never be yanked from his sleep to convince spordcum that he is a better champion than John L. Sullivan's Texas tarantula, Jim McCormick.

Gus Ruhlin has attended to that little matter for Jeffries. McCormick lasted eighteen rounds with Ruhlin last night at Colma. He would have lasted about eighteen seconds if Ruhlin had been the Ruhlin of old days.

The affair will go on record as a knock out for Ruhlin. It was not one. McCormick was simply discouraged at the way things were going, and took advantage of a few ordinary taps to seek the floor. When he fell the second time Referee Graney said it was the flashlight photographer who did it. The artist referred to wanted to secure a picture of the grand finale, and touched off his powder works just as McCormick was arising after being sent to the canvas by the Akron giant.

Had Awful Effect on Texan.

The concussion and glare had an awful effect on the Texas. He must have thought that Ruhlin struck him with a cobble stone, for he fell quicker than he did the first time. He came up dejectedly and went down again from a poke with the right. This time he was counted out while he was wriggling and flopping like a newly landed trout.

McCormick did not display any top notch qualifications at any time during the fight. He used a left stab for the stomach and threw in overhand rights in the direction of Ruhlin's head. His judgment for the distance was faulty and he fluttered

WILL TACKED TO DOOR, AGED HERMIT WORTH $200,000 ENDS LIFE

SUICIDE BY HANGING OF MYSTERIOUS WORCESTER RECLUSE.

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Aug. 12.—With a will in which he mysteriously disposed of property valued at $200,000 tacked to the door in front of him, William A. Richardson was found dead in the rooms he had occupied alone for thirty years, to-day. He had committed suicide by hanging.

Mr. Richardson was eighty-two years of age. For years a prosperous tailor, he retired from business some years ago, and since then had done little, remaining in seclusion in the three rooms he occupied in the Flagg block, No. 288 Main street.

In the first mail to-day, Henry L. Parker, Sr., who has been attorney for Mr. Richardson for forty years, received a postal card which read:

"Please call at my rooms to-day." His aged client's name was signed.

Mr. Parker found that the door leading to Mr. Richardson's room opened at the turn of the knob.

In a kneeling position within the room and directly in front of the door, Mr. Parker discovered the old man. Thinking he was in pain, Mr. Parker started to lift him.

Worth About $200,000.

Then he discovered the rope round his neck. It went over the door to the other side and was fastened to the outer knob. A box on which the old man had evidently stood and then kicked away was near at hand.

There was a note on the door. It read: "If sudden death overtakes me please notify Henry L. Parker, Sr., my executor."

There was also a note addressed to Mr. Parker. In this the aged recluse made disposition of his property. He told where the key to his safety deposit vault was to be found. A bank book, also tacked to the door, showed deposits for $200,000.

Mr. Parker told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that Mr. Richardson was worth about $200,000. "The will I shall not make public until it is filed for probate," he said. "Mr. Richardson has made provisions for the disposition of his property."

Received No Callers.

The old man was considered much of a mystery in Worcester. Thirty years ago he took possession of the parlor, bedroom and kitchen in the Flagg block, receiving no callers and doing his own work. When he was in the tailoring business, and while he made money people had no idea that he was worth so much money.

He never married. It is not known that he has a relative in the world.

For some time he suffered from heart disease. A few weeks ago he talked over plans with Mr. Parker for entering a sanitarium where he could be treated for his trouble. His ill health worried him, and he feared that some morning he would be found dead in bed.

Mr. Parker says this is the only reason he can assign for his ending his life.

SHEA REELECTED BY TEAMSTERS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12.—Cornelius P. Shea was to-day re-elected as president of the Teamsters' Union, after one of the stormiest sessions in the history of the Union. Every delegate was in the convention hall before 8:30 o'clock today in response to frantic demands of faction managers each of whom suspected an early trick by the other.

Shea declared all rumors false that he would decline to run if the Chicago strike was not endorsed and that he came to the convention to-day to make the fight of his life.

The nominations of officers started before the taking of vote on the strike motion. Shea was placed in nomination by Delegate Dilsea of San Francisco. Shea then turned the gavel over to Delegate Malloy of Dubuque, Iowa, and took place among the fighters on the floor.

Daniel Furman of Chicago was placed in nomination by Jerry McCarthy as a man to harmonize all the factions. Representing the biggest local teamsters in the world, Sheridan of Chicago made way for Furman in courses, and seconded the nomination amid tremendous applause.

"At the close the vote was announced as follows: Shea, 129; Furman, 121.

MOSELEY BURIED AT FOREST HILLS

The funeral of Frederick C. Moseley, the Dorchester lumber dealer, who was killed by a train at Neponset station, and whose widow prayed thirteen hours over his body in the hope that his life might be returned, was held to-day from the Christian Science Church in the Back Bay. A large number of friends attended the service. Burial was at Forest Hills Cemetery.

BOY DITCHES TRAIN FOR FUN

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Aug. 12.—With an iron bar Clayton Bastian broke the lock of a Baltimore & Ohio switch at Centre Road, O., and seizing the lever, threw it partly over. Then, from a hiding place, he saw a work train, loaded with one hundred men and running at thirty miles an hour, dash into the open switch. The engine was overturned and four cars hurled from the rails, but no one was hurt.

Bastian, who is only fifteen years old, is in jail. He has confessed and said: "I just wanted to see a train pile up."

CRUISER SENT TO VENEZUELA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The cruiser Galveston has been ordered to proceed to Venezuela with all speed. This order is considered here, notwithstanding the various explanations of naval officers, to mean that the mission of W. P. Calhoun of Venezuela, must be backed up by a naval force.

The situation between the United States and Venezuela became acute by reason of the decision of the Venezuelan High Court against the asphalt trust, and the filing of the protest against the trust against Venezuela's action, a copy of which was filed with the United States Charge d'Affaires at Caracas, and which made the United States a party to the protest.

ROCKEFELLER AUTO CRASHES INTO TREE

WILLIAM D. HAS MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH NEAR PARIS.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—William D. Rockefeller had a miraculous escape from death here to-day. His automobile crashed into a tree and tumbled down an embankment.

The accident occurred at Ablaines, in the department of Somme. Mr. Rockefeller had gone out with a chauffeur for a spin through the country. Suddenly the chauffeur lost control of the machine, and it plunged against a tree at a rate of about fifteen miles an hour.

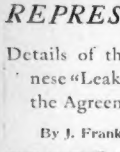
The force of the smash was so great that the automobile tumbled down an embankment beside the tree and Mr. Rockefeller, who had been considerably shocked by the crash, remained in it. He was not injured at all beyond shock. The car was wrecked.

AGENTS OF MONEY KINGS IN PORTSMOUTH TO CONFER WITH RUSSIANS

REPRESENTATIVES OF ROTHSCHILDS AND MORGAN BELIEVED TO BE DISCUSSING LOAN

Details of the Terms Proposed by the Japanese "Leaked" from Russian Sources, Despite the Agreement as to Secrecy.

By J. Frank Davis.



HOTEL WENTWORTH, NEWCASTLE, N. H., Aug. 12.—The Russian reply to the Japanese peace terms — the reply that will unquestionably evoke from the Japanese their irreducible minimum —was finally reduced to its elaborate form, in Russian and French, during the night, and was taken in the morning to the navy yard, where M. Witte and his associates had notified Baron Komura and Minister Takahira to be ready to receive it.

"Peace with honor" is the sentiment of the reply, as it has been the sentiment of Russian expressions of opinion as to the outcome of the negotiations since they were first begun.

No indemnity.

No cession of Russian land, or land that shall place Russia at the mercy of her Eastern enemy.

No Japanese Monroe doctrine; or, in other words, no limitation of Russia's future naval power in the Far East.

No disarmament of Russian fortifications that have not passed into Japan's hands.

These are conceded to be the terms, in rough, of the Russian answer. And while Witte and Komura are matching their brains and their diplomacy, the agents of J. Pierpont Morgan, August Belmont and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the great financiers, have come to plan with the Russians the floating of the peace loan the Russians know must be negotiated if the war is to have an end.

The arrival of the agents of the financiers and their subsequent stay at the Wentworth, has been as unobtrusive as could be imagined. Not one of them will admit he is here on business. It is according to their own conversation, purely a matter of coincidence that they chanced to select Newcastle as the place for their vacation and the crucial days of the peace conference as the date.

FINANCIERS AT NEWCASTLE.

John Hetrick, private secretary to August Belmont, and Benjamin Loeb, whose father was the second partner in the great firm of Kuhn, Loeb Co., of which Jacob H. Schiff is the head, are two of the finest agents who are here. The third is confidential agent of J. Pierpont Morgan. His name on the register might as well be John Smith.

Why the Russians suddenly adopted the policy of allowing the Japanese to "leak" is a question only a student of Russian diplomatic politics would answer. There was no accident to the relinquishing of the terms of the Japanese terms broadcast—especially the terms regarding which it is to be expected the other great powers of the world might have something like a word to say.

Witte and Komura, according to the statements of the Japanese delegation, had agreed that nothing regarding terms or negotiations was to be given out except by mutual consent. The Japanese had announced that they would not consent to the publication of their terms until the signature of a treaty, and that they would not agree to the announcement of such of the terms as might finally be accepted.

Yet M. Korostovetz, after conferring with M. Witte, deliberately admitted clauses of the Japanese demands, and informed seven newspaper correspondents at supper, when I happened to be one, to four matters touched upon in the demands of the Mikado, he had finally supposted every newspaper man in the party upon the nature of some of the clauses Russia would accept or refuse.

QUESTIONS ASKED.

Why?

Is it a part of a great plan of Muscovite diplomacy to arouse the powers to a snatching from Japan of the spoils of war, as they were snatched after the war with China?

Do the Russians believe that other powers, learning definitely that the Japanese have dreamed a limitation of the Russian navy in the East, which is the end seems Eastern Asia for the Russians might again interfere and in some manner assist the Czar's government out of the quagmire in which it has fallen?

Do they hope to raise some kind of a breach with Japan by their discussion of things which had been promised Komura would not be discussed?

M. Witte himself was accessible, in a limited degree, last evening. I saw him. Three or four others saw him. He said little, no more than he had authorized M. Korostovetz to say for him: that Russia would accept such of the Japanese terms, with modifications, as were compatible with Russian national honor and dignity, and would refuse such terms as were not compatible with those qualities.

But his very accessibility, together with M. Korostovetz's statement to me, in reply to a question, that all the admissions he had made were by authority of the Russian plenipotentiary, indicated that this "leakage" of terms was neither accident nor a sudden acquirement of intense friendliness for the reporters, but a part of some great game the Russians are playing.

The day was a wearing one for everybody. The intense heat and the plague of flies and mosquitoes which is making life almost unbearable here would have made it uncomfortable enough. Added to that was a feeling of worry and unrest on the part of everyone.

Diplomats Keep Close.

The Russians remained in their rooms—most of them—all day. Long cablegrams were received from the Czar and the work of translating them kept the linger artaches of the ambassy busy. A formal conference, called by M. Witte in the afternoon, was held between him, M. Pokotilloff minister to China, and an Eastern authority, and M. Chikoff, director of the imperial treasury.

The Russian reply was drafted at noon, at which time word was sent Baron Komura that the Russians would meet him and his colleagues at 10 o'clock to-day. A reply was at once returned by hand of Secretary Adachi that Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira would be present.

Minister Pokotiloff and Secretary Rosjestvensky went swimming at noon, and enjoyed it like boys. The minister to China is no remarkable swimmer, but the secretary demonstrated an ability to keep afloat under any conditions that would have made this conference unnecessary if it had been possessed by his unfortunate cousin.

The Russians dined in their private rooms. M. Witte at the head of the table and M. Pokotiloff at the foot, and after dinner only Baron Rosen appeared in the public reception room, and he for but a moment on an errand.

If the Russians were not much in evidence during the day, the Japanese were even more retiring. From morning to till dinner not a member of the mission appeared below stairs except to go to and from the dining room, except when a secretary came down for the daily papers.

Movements of Japanese.

The Adonis-like Mr. Matsumoto, who holds degrees from the Universities of Pennsylvania, Brown and Heidelberg, is a member of the Japanese delegation who changes his clothes to fit every requirement of the day, was on hand, and the handsome face and figure of Lieutenant-Commander Takeshita was constantly in evidence, but they are mere members of the mission.

Takeshita is a great favorite with the ladies, for which one really cannot blame the latter. A handsome white bull terrier, belonging to one of the other suites, has become attached to Takeshita in his constantly. One of the Summer girls suggested to him that he ought to call the animal "Witte," but Takeshita was too much of a diplomat to see the humor to the extent of a word.

In the evening Baron Komura, Mr. Sato and several secretaries came down stairs, stood smoking on the piazza and divided their time between a game of billiards and vivid lightning and slapping mosquitoes. Something was said, however, of the peace responsibility that rests upon his shoulders but made him a much lighter man than he has been here. Mr. Takahira, who was followed and did not appear at all the second day evening, did not appear last night in the lounge.

Secretary Sato remained visible long after the others had retired, and seemed to be had ignored the cards that had been sent to his room by scores of the Summer girls of his daily conference with all the correspondents in the party. He was getting as a "knee-feast" and a "cinch meet," and forty-five minutes after the table had been catechised for half an hour, with a few low and the pleasantly sarcastic remark, "I will not impose upon you gentlemen any longer."

PLAYED WITH SUMMER GIRLS.

Later in the evening, he and Lieutenant-Commander Takeshita made the bit of their lives with a big crowd of Summer girls by playing the good old country game of "Johnny Roosjem," in the hall room, in the course of which, in the scramble for seats, Mr. Sato received a nasty little fall on the polished floor.

I interrupted the sociability to tell Mr. Sato what I considered the best bit of news in the papers about the Japanese terms and asked him whether he was willing to state Japan's terms.

"I cannot say," was his reply.

"If the treaty does not contain the terms you have discussed, how will the terms terms be made public?"

"The Japanese would make them public in about fifty years," he said. Then he smiled a smile that was child-like and bland, and added, "that they may be read."

No one believes that they will end the conference. Whatever the reply of Russia may be, it is certain that Japan will again address the Russian plenipotentiaries. Her next note will contain her irreducible minimum.

POLICE SHAKE-UP NEEDED FOR REFORM, SAYS MAYOR

JOHN E. PHIPPS. HON. WILLIAM D. HASTINGS.

MALDEN CHIEF AND MAYOR, WHO WOULD HAVE A NEW LEADER OF POLICE

Hastings Says Malden Chief Has Failed to Change Beats of Patrolmen.

MALDEN, Aug. 12—Mayor William A. Hastings was seen by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter in regard to the rumored shake-up scheduled, in the police department, as a result of the liquor scandals that have "broken" that have been so freely made. Mayor Hastings said:

"There is a shake-up coming. The chief of police has had cards blanche and I have been looking to him for results. They have not, however, been up to expectations. For one thing, the chief has not made the changes desired in the routes of patrolmen. He has had a list of shifts made up, but has not put them into effect.

"Of course, I do not think Chief Phipps is new to the police business. He has been in office barely three months and of course it takes time to learn the police business, as well as any other. But we expected some improvements before this.

New to Police Business.

"There will be a shake-up in a day or two. The big shake-up will not come until later.

The Mayor added that some people had even written him accusing him, the Mayor, of getting a share of the liquor graft. He defined the idea as "absurd." He said, also, that he had received letters by the wholesale asking that something be done to stop the liquor traffic.

As to whether he intends to demand the resignation of Chief Phipps, the Mayor would not say.

Chief Phipps, when seen by the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, seem to feel very badly over the matter. He said that of course he had realized that there would be more or less criticism of his acts, but he had not expected anything quite so strong.

Will Do As Mayor Wishes.

"I have not been asked for my resignation," he said, "although I am willing to resign at the request of the Mayor if it is for the best. I had had no intimation that I would be asked to resign, and definite over the liquor traffic until I read the accounts in the newspapers.

"Of course, I am new in the police business and it takes time to become accustomed to the running of the department. I have not been idle, however, and I have had several letters by the wholesale asking that something be done to stop the liquor traffic.

Regarding the illegal sale of liquor, he said that had reached, the Mayor in person supervised, showed that the police had been attending to that matter. He would raid all such places as soon as they were discovered. Regarding the charge that he was getting a rake-off he uttered a general denial.

SAYS SOME TERMS MUST BE MODIFIED

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 12—Speaking with full authority for M. Witte, M. Korostovetz, secretary for the Russian envoys, gave the press answers to various questions which have been propounded to him.

"Will the Russian answer be presented to the conference to-day?" he was asked.

"Yes. It is completed and will be presented for consideration."

"Is this in consequence of instructions received from St. Petersburg?"

"I cannot say anything about what has been received from St. Petersburg."

"Can you state the nature of the reply.

"I can say that some of the terms which are not satisfactory to Russia must and actually will be corrected by. Others will be objected to."

"Do you mean that they will be rejected?"

"Our reply is very general, because those matters are to be taken up for discussion. But I will say that there are some things which are to be modified. The indemnity and others which must be modified.

"Is it true that the conditions include a limitation of the naval force which Russia shall maintain in the Pacific?"

"There is a reference to the subject."

"Is there a requirement in reference to the rights of the Japanese to fish in Russian waters?"

"There is a demand about fisheries."

As to the report that the Japanese representatives had been found to be restricted, not permitting the envoys to ratify the treaty, while the Russian credentials gave that power, Mr. Korostovetz said:

"That matter has been satisfactorily arranged."

KAISER FEARFUL OF THE YELLOW PERIL

MANCHESTER, Eng., Aug. 12—The Despatch says it is rumored in official circles that the Kaiser has addressed a communication to President Roosevelt suggesting that the United States may propose a provision being made in the peace terms which Japan and Russia may agree upon, to prevent Japan from acquiring ascendency over China.

POLAND POLICE CHIEF SEVERELY INJURED BY BOMB

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 12—The chief of police of Rodom, Poland, was severely injured by the explosion of a bomb which was thrown at him as he was riding through the city in his carriage. So great was the force of the explosion that several houses in the vicinity of the spot where the bomb was thrown were wrecked. The assailant escaped in the confusion caused by the explosion.

Serious agrarian disturbances are reported from the Government of Podolia, when but for the invitation of President Roosevelt and the meeting at Portsmouth, foreign mediation would have been offered and Russia put in an embarrassing position.

This complication is now eliminated. Russia now plans to begin her final campaign to exhaust the enemy.

The Russian consensus is that no peace made now can be permanent.

Japan, therefore, is quite justified in assuming terms which Russia is unable even to consider.

One may go even further and say the Czar would not accept even far more moderate terms at the present moment.

The commander-in-chief and practically the whole army in the field have been imploring him for weeks to give them an opportunity to redeem the national honor. To sign a peace in such circumstances would cost the Romanoff dynasty its throne.

COMSTOCK IS INDICTED FOR BOND THEFT

Charges Made by Woman Soon After His Report of $120,000 Robbery.

An indictment was returned to-day by the Suffolk County Grand Jury against Charles A. Comstock, 25, a Waterville gold mine promoter, charged with the larceny of $120,000 in bonds and Lake Shore collateral bonds from Mrs. Cora A. Frothingham.

Comstock is the man who reported to the police that he had stolen the New York Central and Lake Shore bonds while she had given him an collateral for 500 shares of Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad stock which he said he had purchased for her. He was arrested by Inspector Metiarr. Although he lived at the United States Hotel, he was found by the police in a North Cambridge house, where he had been in hiding several days.

Court case was held for the Grand Jury, and failing to secure bail has since been confined in the Charles street jail.

In all fifty-two true bills were reported by the Grand Jury and twenty-eight "no bills."

Lawrence Ammun and Frank J. Williams, charged with the robbery of James Ritchie on the Commons July 31, were indicted. Ritchie was knocked down in broad daylight, brutally beaten and robbed of $20.

CZAR BALKS AT TERMS OF JAPAN

answer to Baron Komura. Now it is believed that the answer will be a short one, as the Japanese envoys will ask for time to consider the same in the exchange of hands. It may come about, therefore, that the final proceedings of the conference will go over at least until Monday.

On what seems to be good authority it is asserted that the Russian answer takes this position:

"RUSSIA NOT DEFEATED."

That Russia is not defeated.

That she does not expect to be defeated in the war in the near future.

That she cannot be expected to pay an indemnity under the circumstances, for two reasons.

One—Because an indemnity is not extracted from a foe that is not conquered and is still able to fight.

Two—Because cession of territory is only demanded of a foe whose country is prostrate in the enemy's hands.

In short, although the Japanese terms are considered severe in the extreme, according to special advices received here, no one believes that Japan expects Russia to accept them, and it is therefore believed that Japan consented to the peace conference, knowing well that it would prove futile.

The Czar's action, when the terms called by M. Witte were laid before him, was most significant. Ordering a carriage and escorts, he drove during the darkest hours of the night to Krasnoe Selo, the great military camp, two hours distant from Petersburg. The only other occasion on which he has left Peterhof was to meet the Kaiser.

FRATERNIZES WITH ARMY.

His reply to Japan's demands is a demonstration of his personal allegiance to the army.

He invited all the officers of the Imperial Guard to luncheon. He sat at the head of the table with the banner and at the close of the meal he proposed a silent toast to the army of Russia.

Every man understood the significance of the act without a single spoken word. They stood up and drank in impressive silence.

"I can say that none of the terms which are unjust or injurious to Russian rights and equality will be accepted by. Others will be objected to."

This is the first time since the war began that the Czar has fraternized with his officers. The Czarina and the Dowager Empress accompanied the Czar to Krasnoe Selo.

It is noted that Japan's demand for the surrender of the interned warships and a limitation of the Russian fleet in the Far East excites even greater resentment than the claims for an indemnity and the cession of Saghalien.

NATIONAL PRIDE AROUSED.

Although she rejects Japan's terms and the peace conference is apparently doomed to end in a fiasco, Russia will gain from it certain advantages which she deems of inestimable value.

The first is that national pride is at least aroused and the country reconciled to war, if not enthusiastic in its prosecution.

The remarkable change in all classes of Orthodox Russian opinion is not difficult to understand. The struggle has become universally unpopular and the national pride many times humbled until after the battle of Mukden.

Peace ought to have been made after the fall of Port Arthur, especially in view of the great influence in favor of the Russian resistance, because the country believed the war useless and national prestige was not really affected.

The battle of Mukden, however, brought stories of Russian rout and panic, which followed by the destruction of the fleet, were regarded as a serious national disgrace.

PEACE TALK DIMINISHED.

Then Russia began to arouse herself. Peace talk has diminished steadily from that day to this. Russian honor was at stake, and the only question was how to control the international agitation while the empire rose to the task of vindicating its military prestige.

Then came President Roosevelt's invitation, and Russia agreed it as a God-sent opportunity. She was confident that Japan's terms would be severe, and she knew the country would resent them. Therefore she sent M. Witte, whose real task was to win American sympathy.

Knowledge of the Japanese proposals is they become known will solidify the nation for war as nothing else could have done.

For this Russia thanks President Roosevelt with genuine gratitude. Another advantage of great importance that Russia has gained is this: other military blows are probably in store for her. She will lose Vladivostok and probably will be again defeated in Manchuria.

She will then arise to the situation, throne.

BREAD FAMINE AND STARVATION IN NEW YORK!

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Poverty and kees distress are everywhere to be seen on the East Side. The bread famine is a reality. There is not a loaf of fresh bread in a territory of several square miles in which live half a million persons. Want few small, stale loaves are still there, are being disposed of at four and even five times the original prices.

Famine is abroad, and all for the sake of a principle which the Jews, who once made the bread, are ready to stake their lives and those of their families to be sustained. In order to check distress and bring the bakers back to their workshops, the houses are open to the terms demanded by the late employes. This, the boss bakers declare, they will never do, and the strikers are as obdurate.

One of the most important features of the strike was the introduction yesterday of Organizer Herman Robinson, who came as a delegate from President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, to try to induce the bakers and the employers to agree.

It was suggested to both sides of the controversy that each appoint a committee to hold a conference and discuss ways, means and terms of settlement.

This appearance of the American Federation of Labor heads a new complication to the trouble, giving to the strikers' position the indorsement of the main body of Labor Workmen of the United States.

Mr. Robinson had a long conference with representatives of both sides of the controversy and assured President Kurz, of the Bakers' Association, that the demands the boss bakers would accede to his suggestion.

He hoped the bakers would meet any committee named.

Brooklyn Local No. 3, has in response to an appeal made upon it by the bakers in Manhattan, failed to join in a sympathetic strike, but has given the strikers $1,000 for a week for their principles.

Appeals for having bread made upon him by the strikers, Sam Kurz has sent a telegram to the International Executive Committee of the Bakers' Union in Chicago, asking that the unions there be suspended for its disobedience of instructions.

Cocktails and Peace.

By Morton Birge.

The Portsmouth barkeepers are taking advantage of the Peace Conference patronage to put the price of cocktails up to twenty-five cents.

HER victories lath Gentle Peace, as well as War, they say.
Full well they realize that fact in Portsmouth-town to-day.
This conference has scored a point in record-breaking time.
Already it has jumped the price of cocktails up a dime.
The town is filled with mighty men—ambassadors renowned.
An Envoy Extraordinary's easy to be found.
They're authorized to pass upon the question—"War or Peace?"
And if they once can come to terms this awful war must cease.
But even these important men—these envoys from afar,
Have had their thunder stolen by the men behind the bar;
For while the envoys argue and diplomacy holds sway,
A cocktail costs a quarter at a Portsmouth bar to-day.
What matters it if Rosen and Komura can't agree,
Or Takahira says Japan must be supreme at sea?
The one fact that affects them in old Portsmouth-by-the-Shore
Is fifteen kopecks will not buy a cocktail any more.
The question of indemnity—the biggest one of all,
May find its own solution in the cocktail-sellers' gall.
Let all this extra profit be paid over to Japan—
'Twill be the largest payment yet since History began.

GIRL WHO SAVED 2 LIVES FROM FIRE GIVEN MEDAL

ALICE AND JAMES COONEY.

RESCUED CHILDREN AND FIRE HEROINE.

Humane Society Awards One of Silver to Miss McNee, Who Smashed in Door to Rescue Children.

For risking her life to save two children from a fire at the garage on Mon Repos Park at the corner of Conflagration at Chestnut and Brimmer streets, May 31, Miss Thelma McNee has been presented a beautifully inscribed silver medal by the Humane Society.

In the face of great danger, Miss McNee clambered over rooftops and rescued James Cooney, seven, and his little sister Alice, three, both of whom had been locked in by their mother, who was on an errand.

Miss McNee lived with her father and mother directly over the garage. The Cooneys lived in an adjoining tenement on the third floor. To effect a rescue Miss McNee, who knew the children's mother had left them locked in, went to the roof of her own house and down the stairway in the next entrance.

Smashed in Door.

She smashed the door down and discovered little Alice lying on the floor overcome by smoke, which was rapidly filling the tenement.

In telling her experiences Miss McNee said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"I took Alice in my right arm. She was a good weight, being somewhat overcome from smoke on my back with his arms around my neck. In this way we managed to get back up the stairway and over the space between the roofs to the second floor. Explosion came and we were thrown against the fence by the shock. Alice hurt her cheek and leg.

"The fact that two of the stairs over which Miss McNee had to cross with her precious burden were burned, gives some idea of the risk she took.

Again a Heroine.

The latter part of last month Miss McNee again distinguished herself by saving her employer, Dr. Fred A. Merrill, dentist, No. 4 Walnut street, from being overcome by smoke at a fire in the building. The doctor was temporarily blinded and was groping about the room when Miss McNee and Miss Elizabeth Bell, an assistant, came to the rescue, and when taking an arm took him from the building.

FIRST TEST OF NEW $2,000,000 DRYDOCK TODAY

Armored Cruiser Maryland First Vessel to Be Repaired There.

CROWD CHEERS WARSHIP

Cheered by a large crowd, the armored cruiser Maryland entered the gigantic new $2,000,000 drydock at the Charlestown Navy Yard to-day to test this structure, which caused the failure of two firms before it was completed.

A taut string, gay with red, white and blue streamers, stretched across the slit of the drydock, marking the line of entrance. The grow pressed against this string, snapped it, and the cruiser slid into the dark basin. The two pieces of string were pulled ashore on either side of the dock, and bits of the ribbon streamers were distributed among the women present as souvenirs.

The Maryland's bow broke this marking string at 8:34 a. m. At 9:07 the cruiser was made fast and at 9:27 the dock gate was floated into place and the construction officials began pumping out the big basin. Only one of the two 350-horsepower pumps, capable of throwing 6,000 gallons a minute, was used, as the Maryland was resting in twenty-nine feet of water this pumping took three and one-half hours.

"The drydock is 750 feet long, 114 feet wide, and is the largest on the Atlantic seaboard. It was begun in 1898 by O'Brien & Gaynor, of Philadelphia, who failed while doing the work. The city Trust Company of Philadelphia, which went security for O'Brien & Sheehan, took up the work, but also failed. The job was completed by the receivers for the City Trust Company.

COURTS DEATH TO SAVE HER GIRL BABY'S LIFE

MRS. MARINO AND GIRL CRUSHED BY CAR.

But Mother and Child Are Crushed by Crowded Trolley Trying to Dodge Big Van.

In the vain endeavor to save her little child from the cruel wheels of an electric car, Mrs. Marie Marino of No. 153 Washington street, North, was herself terribly crushed and bruised. The child, Cecilia, who is but five years old, is in a precarious condition.

Miss Marino was crossing the street in front of her home with her little girl and was trying to escape from a heavy van that was bearing down on them she dodged directly in front of an outward-bound Dudley street car. The motorman did his best to stop the car, but the rails were slippery, and although he reversed the power and suddenly shut off the passengers were thrown from their seats, the car bore down on the little one.

Mrs. Marino saw that the car was going to run down upon her screamed and tried to push Cecilia back from the track. It was too late, however. The child was thrown under the front wheels of the car and one of her legs was crushed that it will have to be amputated if she recovers sufficiently to stand the operation. The mother was thrown several feet and fell on her face. Her injuries are not dangerous but are severe.

Patrolmen Merritt, Morgan and Blue got the little girl from under the car and she was hurried to the Relief station. The mother was taken there also in an ambulance. Both were unconscious and when the mother regained consciousness she saw her daughter on an operating table near her, and forgetting her own injuries begged the attending physicians to save the little one.

BURRAGE SAYS PEAT STORY IS WEIRD DREAM

Not Interested in Any Scheme to Revolutionize Process of Smelting.

MAKES VIGOROUS DENIAL

Albert C. Burrage, the Standard Oil's multimillion representative, denied to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day that he was at the head of a company which was engaged in using a secret process of peat by which copper could be separated from the gross impurities and the cost of the finished product reduced two or three cents a pound.

Mr. Burrage said:

"The article is a weird dream. I have not been engaged in any raid on Copper Range and I have not heard of peat being used for smelting copper ore. The article is almost wholly fictitious, with the exception of the fact that for the past year I have been associated with some other people in acquiring a tract of swamp or peat land in Hanson and Halifax for agricultural purposes. To talk of transporting copper ores to this place for smelting, or peat from this place to copper mines for smelting, is ridiculous."

Experiments with Peat.

The story says that in a little hamlet in Plymouth County scientific experiments have been going on with the secret peat process by which it was claimed that the copper industry of the country would become a monopoly in the hands of Mr. Burrage and his associates, among whom he mentioned Thomas W. Lawson.

The story goes on to say that Burrage, who is secretive in this matter have guarded the scientific work well. Not until they were positive that there could be no mistake did they go ahead and peat. The new industry and searching experiments were conducted from a scientific and from a practical standpoint. When it was demonstrated that copper ore can be disintegrated and the pure copper separated from the base metals and slag, the Burrage gang set to work over the world beginning with this kind of peat.

The peat has the property of giving off a great heat of long duration, which makes it immeasurably superior to coal.

Big Loads Shipped Away.

The discovery was made known to Mr. Burrage about two years ago, and he immediately began investigations. An agent named Damon was sent to Bryantville, and he quietly bought a big tract of swamp land for little more than the price of peat. Then a gang of Italian laborers began digging and ditching and draining the swamp. The farmers gathered around and watched. They were unsympathetic and commented regarding Mr. Damon's mentality. Soon after them offered to sell a swamp they found it was quickly bought. Soon carpenters and a gang of millwrights was erected in the heart of the swamp. At night the farmers saw flames gushing from the chimney. Then came big drays loads of reddish rock. It was broken up to the swamp from the siding of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. And when big carloads of peat were shipped away the people who had swamps that Mr. Damon had not secured began to figure on what it all meant.

Prices for swamp land increased tremendously. The town of Bryantville had a boom that equalled that of any Western mining town of recent birth. The last piece of swamp sold was for several times what the owner was taxed for, and he is sorry to-day he didn't ask more, for he could undoubtedly have obtained it. The secret of the Plymouth County men securing Canada and Ireland for the swamps. Big tracts have been bought in Canada, and it is the plans whereby the peat can be easily dug and transported to the lake ports on the shores of Lake Superior. A famous bog in Ireland, worth a great sum, was secured by the Burrage agents at a tremendous figure.

Lawson's Prophecy.

The manipulators of the enterprise have a big factory in the Bryantville town, equipped some time ago for tin smelting. It is believed this building will be made the nucleus of the company's big prospective system of copper smelters.

It is a well known fact that for some time Thomas W. Lawson has been advertising that copper will soon sell at a tremendously reduced cost, and that he has refrained from putting securities in his Trinity mine. These facts and other little matters that have become known indicate that the Boston Copper King was interested with the aid of the big scheme under way, and took an active part in it.

BROCKTON PEOPLE LOOK FOR MORE SENSATIONS

REPORTED THAT HARRIS WAS NOT ONLY POLICEMAN MENTIONED IN CHARGES.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Aug. 12.—Many citizens expect a great upheaval in the police department as the result of the disclosures at the hearing given Inspector Harris by Mayor Keith, and which ended in that officer being dismissed from the force. Since Stella Elliot made her charges against Harris, it is understood that other women of this character have talked freely, and that the names of other policemen have been mentioned in connection with unsavory accusations.

One man in particular is said to be involved in shocking charges. His name is not made public. Mayor Keith will not admit that the authorities now have in mind another policeman who is said to be guilty of acts that may result in his being ousted from the force.

"No formal charges have been presented to me," said the Mayor. "My attention has been called to a case merely as one that demands investigation. I am going to make a thorough one."

It is evident that the case is very similar to the Harris scandal. Since the dismissal of Harris, women who have grievances against policemen are not afraid to talk. Before they feared that they could not get justice against any man of rank and influence in the police department. The rank and file of the police feel keenly the stigma put upon it by the disclosures at the investigation conducted by Mayor Keith, and say that if there are dishonorable men wearing the shield they should be convicted and removed from office.

Harris Says Nothing.

Former Inspector Harris has made no statement in regard to his summary removal. Elliot girl and Jennie Sherman. It is understood that his counsel told him that there could be no appeal from the decision of Mayor Keith.

Harris stayed at home with his wife and parents all day, and it is said that the letter from Mayor Keith was a great shock to him and his family. Friends of Harris say that Harris prejudiced his case by not asking for an immediate hearing when the Mayor suspended him for thirty days.

Stella Elliot first made her charges in October, but official action was not taken until Mrs. A. P. Alden took the girl before the mayor and aldermen. The statements published in a Brockton weekly publication added to public excitement, and were so sensationary that Harris brought charges of criminal libel against Editor W. D. Dwyer.

Harris has vehemently denied the charges, and his wife has always had her faith in him by most loyal support.

John B. Morton of Boston is Editor Dwyer's counsel. He is to be in Brockton next week and says there will be more sensational developments.

Warrants for Perjury.

"I shall ask for warrants for the arrest of certain parties," he said. "I cannot say who these are until the time arrives for action, but you may say that I shall ask for these warrants for perjury. I'll be out about the middle of the week."

What was told by Driver William S. Cushing regarding the use to which police carriages are put has astounded the authorities and caused intense indignation among citizens. Brockton has always taken pride in being a community where there was little vice, and there is the strongest public demand that the light shall be turned on full force.

BOYDEN SAYS GIRL REFUSED TO SIGN HARRIS CHARGES

In regard to statements published about the case of dismissed Inspector Harris, City Marshal Boyden of Brockton to-day made the following statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"On October 15 last, after Stella Elliot had been arrested by Harris, and convicted in court, I had a talk with her in my office. I told her I had heard of her charges against Harris, and asked her if they were true. Yes, she said. Will you prefer written charges and sign them? I asked. No, she replied with a laugh.

"I told the girl that what she said was true Harris was guilty of a very serious offense under police department rules. I said he should be punished if guilty. She absolutely refused to make charges in writing. They are required under Rule 11, adopted by the Board of Aldermen in 1896. Without them would be impossible to do as required form. I felt I could do nothing more. She had been arrested, tried and convicted. I didn't consider the uncorroborated statement of a woman of bad character worth taking against a man having a good reputation.

"Since I have been marshal there have been more than 100 complaints against policemen and in just one case has the complainant backed up the charge with a signed statement and by action. The majority of complaints have come from people of the class with which the police have to deal officially. I propose to live up to the police department rules without regard to the shielding of any man."

GRAND JURY FREES PASCAL

Henry M. Pascal, accused of assault with intent to murder, by Frederick and Mary Rankin, who were cut with a knife in their home in Homestead place, Charlestown, on July 3, was exonerated by the Grand Jury. Pascal was asked to the Rankin home to dinner and says that after the meal Rankin asked for money to buy drink. Pascal says he refused and that Rankin struck him on the head with a flatiron and Mrs. Rankin beat him with a poker. Stunned by the blow, Pascal says that he swung his hand, holding a knife he had used for a toothpick, back and forth, and his cuts were slight. Then Pascal went to go to the Relief Hospital to have dressed the wounds made by the Rankins.

INDEPENDENT OIL MEN SCORE OVER STANDARD

Reduction of Railroad Rates Won by the Texas Petroleum Refiners.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 12.—The Independent refiners ning Texas petroleum to-day achieved a victory in their fight against the combination composed of the Standard Oil Company and the railroads of the territory between New Orleans and Ohio river points and Chicago. The victory is in the form of a reduction of the north-bound rates on petroleum oils between New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago and Louisville and Cincinnati.

The new rates, which go into effect immediately, were made by the Illinois Central and Louisville & Nashville. The schedule was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, as required by law. The two railroad companies at the same time ask to be discharged from the proceedings began against them by the Gulf Refining Companies, of which Colonel James Guffey, the Pittsburg politician, is a member of the Democratic National Committee, is president.

The reduction means that certain independent refineries will be able to send oil into territory now absolutely dominated by the Standard. Notice has been served by the interstate commission on all roads which have exclusive contracts with private car lines that the railroads will be held responsible by the government for the giving of reasonable rates for cars that are transported in such cars. As a consequence the Michigan Central, the Pere Marquette and Union Pacific railroads have announced that they will provide their own cars for the transportation of fruits and other perishable products. The commissioners believe that this will put the private car lines out of the business.

NORWAY CHIEF GREETS BOSTON

Rev. B. E. Bergesen, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of Roxbury, who presided over the mass meeting held some time ago in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, has received a cablegram from Charles Michelsen, temporarily head of the new Norwegian Government, in response to the message sent him by Boston Norwegians.

The message reads:

Hr. B. E. Bergesen, Boston:

Jeg tilsender mig hjerted af oversende den norske regierings og min egen personlige tak for den fra folkemoldet i Boston den 3 die juli fremsendte hilsen. Det er med stor glæde at modtage saadanne i Amerika fødte var sikkerhed med sin varm og fuldertig sympathi.

Deres serhoedige
CHR. MICHELSEN.

Translation.

I hereby allow myself to send the thanks of the Norwegian Government, as well as my own personally, for the greeting sent from the "people's meeting" in Boston, July 3d. It always gives us great pleasure to see our countrymen in America follow our fate with such a warm and cordial sympathy.

Respectfully yours,
CHR. MICHELSEN.

CLOSE MINT; 600 MEN OUT.

CIVIL SUIT IS NOW FILED IN DUTTON CASE

Lavis & Crowley Sued for $2,000 on Charge of Selling Liquor to Girl.

Charging them with the illegal sale of liquor to Bessie Dutton of No. 54 Falmouth street, a minor, Attorney Clarence H. Blackall, on behalf of Mrs. Tinnie L. Dutton, the girl's mother, has brought suit for $2,000 against Lavis & Crowley, as proprietors of the Hotel Continental, and has announced that he will press suits upon the same grounds against the proprietors of eight other hotels and restaurants as soon as he can prepare the evidence.

The other suits will be against John G. Munro, as proprietor of Higgins's Oyster House, and as former proprietor of the Hotel Continental, in which the damages asked will be $10,000; against the Hotel Woodcock for $10,000; against Brusendorf & Co. of No. 118 Eliot street, the Hotel Trafalgar, Durkee's Hotel, the Park Cafe, Abetel & Bacharach, proprietors, and Rudolph J. Pearce & Co., corner of Tremont and Castle streets.

Suit is brought under Chapter 409, Section 21, of the Revised Laws, which for bids the selling or giving of liquor to a minor, allows the parent or guardian to recover from the proprietor $100 for each offence, whether committed by himself or his agents.

Lavis & Crowley were discharged Thursday on a criminal charge of selling liquor to Bessie Dutton, after Judge Bolster Bumpus, Attorney William Murphy, manager, and two waiters, James Reilly and Robert Sullivan, who are charged with procuring the girl at the Continental. Judge Bolster held responsible by the government for the giving of reasonable rates for cars that are transported in such cars. As a consequence the Michigan Central, the Pere Marquette and Union Pacific railroads have announced that they will provide their own cars for the transportation of fruits and other perishable products. The commissioners believe that this will put the private car lines out of the business.

INQUIRY COURT ON WHIP THEFT

A court of inquiry as the proper means of settling the controversy was the recommendation made here by a young committee from the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., appointed to investigate the alleged whip robbery at a Westfield factory while the state troops were camped near there last month. In a bill presented to the State military authorities, the factory owner named the Ninth Regiment officers as being responsible for the trouble.

The committee's report showed that the soldiers had been invited into the factory by the owner and were followed by some of whom they bought whips. Men from other regiments are fully as responsible for the disappearance of whips as the Ninth, according to the report.

SEEK MISSING MAYOR IN LYNN

LYNN, Aug. 12.—Watch is being kept on a restaurant in this city where it is hoped to locate Parkman B. Flanders, the missing ex-Mayor of Haverhill. The proprietor reported that he thought Flanders had been in his place several times lately, and when shown a photograph of the missing man, said he was quite sure that was the new customer he had noticed.

The ex-Mayor's brother, Sidney Flanders, is directing the search here.

SEER ON BAIL TO ENTERTAIN NEWPORT 400

To Read Palms at Vanderbilt Lawn Fete—Still Under Larceny Charges.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—From prison, with a charge of grand larceny still hanging over him, Walter Kenilworth, Newport's favorite "seer," is returning to-day to the innermost social fold, attending the fete to be given by Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, at Newport.

James Brett Stokes, chairman of the lawn fete committee, told the AMERICAN'S correspondent at Newport that he had received a telegram from Kenilworth saying that he would see him in the morning. Mr. Stokes then announced that Kenilworth would read palms at the lawn fete to-day.

Whether or not Kenilworth, astrologer to King Edward and pet of the richest but fairest doyenne duchesses of democratic America's peerage, had read in the stars that he would be welcomed at the Rough Point fete in spite of the recent unveiling of his past, he did not divulge, but New-porters will be hurried as soon as he found himself a free man.

The fete to which Kenilworth attends is one of the most imposing entertainments of the season, and has all the patrons lined up for months past. It is the most exclusive invitation and visiting lists in the colony.

The palmist was brought from Newport yesterday to answer the charge of grand larceny preferred against him by the "400" seers who says that she worked six years to help him win society's favor and gave him thousands of her money.

The story told by the woman, who styles herself Helen Brinkman Kenilworth, when she caused the arrest of Kenilworth—or Walter Martin, as she declares him to be really—three days ago, the palmist-astrologer brands as absolutely false.

STOPS HORSE, SAVES WOMAN

Petroliman Thomas F. Ray of the La-grange street station, who distinguished himself a short time ago by saving a woman from being killed under the wheels of a truck, again brought himself into prominence to-day by stopping a runaway horse that was about to crash into a crowd of women at the corner of West and Tremont streets.

The animal was attached to a wagon owned by Lewis Aaron Boss, undertaker, No. 50 Lagrange street, and started to run at the Tourabie. Officer Ray saw the animal swerve toward the crowd of shoppers at the corner of West and Tremont, and made a dive for the animal's bridle. He was dragged about fifty feet, but stopped the beast before it could do injury to anyone.

In connection with the story of the graft charges made in the Board of Aldermen by Alderman Linehan, the BOSTON AMERICAN Wednesday used a strip of portraits of Aldermen who had voted to grant the franchise to the Dock & Trust for tracks across East Boston streets.

Among the pictures appeared that of Senator Peters of Beacon. Senator Peters has not in any way been mentioned in connection with the question and the use of his picture was an accident.

COUPLE JAILED, 5 CHILDREN ON THE STREETS

Neglected Little Ones Sent to Institution by Judge Noyes.

Hatless and ragged, with their faces unwashed and tears streaming down their cheeks, five little children of Patrick and Delia Gordon of No. 278 Dorchester avenue, South Boston, appeared in the South Boston District Court as neglected children, and were sent to the Catholic Home for Destitute Children on Harrison avenue.

Thursday the owners of the building in which the Gordians live had the parents arraigned on a charge of malicious mischief, charging them with breaking glass in the house and other petty misdemeanors. Judge John J. Noyes found them guilty and sentenced them to sixty days in the House of Correction, leaving the five little children, the eldest of whom is but eleven and the youngest two, to shift for themselves.

Mrs. Keenan, a neighbor, did what she could for the helpless tots after their parents were sent away, but she could not keep them, and the children were arraigned as neglected. They will stay at the home until their parents are released from the House of Correction. They are Martin, eleven; Michael, eight; Mary, nine; Patrick, four, and John, two years old.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY BROTHER

LYNN, Aug. 12.—Edward M. McBrien was accidentally shot in the forearm by his brother, George F. McBrien, while the young men were shooting at a target at their camp in North Saugus Wednesday. Mc-McBrien was treated at the Lynn Hospital. His wound is not considered serious.

4 FALL VICTIMS TO BOSTON HEAT

Four persons were prostrated by heat in Boston within the last twenty-four hours, and there was intense suffering in the crowded tenement districts. The humidity was very high, making the day one of intense heat. The temperature was not above 87 degrees.

The four persons prostrated are Maud Mandell, of Park Square Hotel; unknown, dying on Lincoln row; Michael Daly, of No. 43 Lenox street, and John Cullen, of No. 37 Eighth street, South Boston.

Daly and the unidentified victim of the heat are in serious condition.

Daniel Maguire, of No. 7 Russell place, West End, found it impossible to sleep in his room and sought relief on the roof.

He fell off, landed on a shed twenty-five feet below and his left arm was fractured in three places. He was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital.

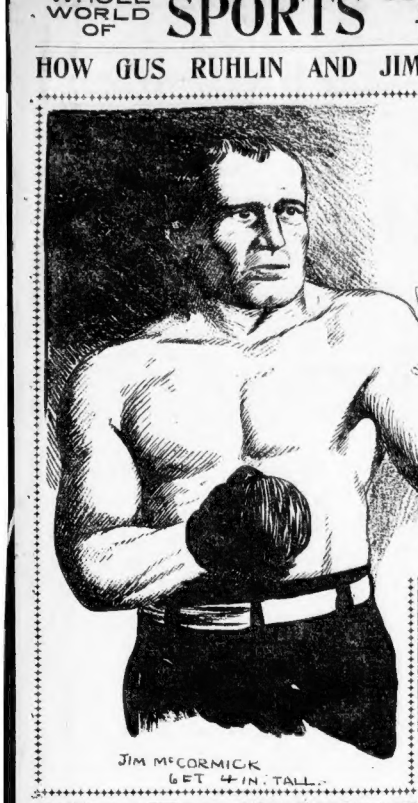
HOW GUS RUHLIN AND JIM M'CORMICK PAIRED OFF IN THEIR BIG FISTIC BATTLE LAST NIGHT



Ruhlin says there never was any doubt about the outcome of the fight, and if they ever met again he would put McCormick out in short order. Ruhlin now will go after Marvin Hart's scalp and declares he will finally land the championship.

Neither Ruhlin nor Jim McCormick showed championship form in their fight last night. If the Akron Giant had been as fast as of old he would have whipped John L.'s protege in 18 seconds, instead of 18 rounds.

RUHLIN WINS FIGHT ON COAST

Crowd Amused Itself by Jeering.

Ruhlin seemed to think slowly and he struck out in a stinted way. He failed to take advantage of openings, and after a couple of rounds had passed the crowd started to jeer and to keep it up until the thing ended.

Ruhlin, who was very high in flesh, began to tire early.

The crowd in McCormick's corner, headed by John L. Sullivan, noticed Ruhlin's gentlemanly and told their man to get in and mix it. The Texan did as he was told and got in several good body punches in the sixth round.

In the next round McCormick was still the aggressor. Ruhlin then waited for McCormick's leads and countered them. The Ruhlin punches began to tell.

McCormick's Ear Exploded.

In the twelfth round McCormick's ear exploded, and after that the Texan fighting spirit seemed to be thoroughly aroused.

Ruhlin closed one of McCormick's eyes with straight lefts, and met his aggressionally with right body blows. McCormick kept ducking and trying long shots for the stomach. His sore ear and his puffed eye bothered him and he sifted regularly in the eighteenth. At that none of the punches from which he went to the floor seemed to be fraught with knockout force to the wind, but immediately afterward reached the face with a straight left. Ruhlin jabbed Jim on the nose with a left and they clinched. The bell found the men sparring in the centre of the ring.

Round 14—Proceedings began with a rush and a clinch. Ruhlin reached McCormick's ear with a hard right. They exchanged hard lefts to the body. Ruhlin rushed McCormick to the ropes and landed a stiff left to the face. They clinched with Referee getting in a blow. Ruhlin landed a light left on the jaw and they clinched. Ruhlin missed a vicious left swing for the air as the bell sounded.

M'CORMICK RETURNS RIGHT.

Round 12—They sparred a moment before rushing into the usual clinch. McCormick landed a right to the neck. Ruhlin returned with a stiff right to the ear and a right to the body. In a breakaway Ruhlin landed a hard right to the jaw. McCormick rushed to a clinch. Ruhlin landed three stiff left jabs to the jaw and McCormick returned a hard right to the head as the bell sounded.

Round 13—The round started with a clinch. McCormick missed a vicious right swing and received a light left jab to the face. Ruhlin reached the jaw with a stiff left and right to the ear. Ruhlin landed a hard left to the face and had McCormick backing. A few short-arm blows were exchanged, but there was no steam behind the blows. The round closed as it began in a clinch.

Round 14—Ruhlin led with a left, which was short, and they clinched. Ruhlin landed a stiff uppercut to the ear, and the member of McCormick's body bled profusely. Ruhlin landed a right to the jaw and rushed his man to the ropes, but did not do any damage. McCormick reached the wind with a hard left. McCormick was held with a hard right. They clinched for a moment and were sparring for wind when the bell sounded.

Round 15—Ruhlin rushed his man to the ropes but did no damage. McCormick landed a hard left on the neck. A clinch followed. McCormick blocked a hard left for the wind. Ruhlin landed a light left to face. McCormick followed with a right to face and a hard right over the eye, which brought blood. McCormick reached the face again with a straight right. The left found them in a clinch.

Round 16—There was the usual rush into a clinch. They exchanged right and left short arm thrusts without doing any damage. Ruhlin reached the body with a light left, and they clinched. Ruhlin landed light lefts to face and body. Ruhlin landed a hard right on the wind with a hard right and got a hard left in return. McCormick stepped in with a stiff right to the wind and they clinched.

Round 17—There was a clinch with no damage. Then there was a mix-up in the centre of the ring, both landing rights and lefts to the body. McCormick landed a hard right to the nose as they came in a clinch. They indulged in a little body fighting without much damage. Gus landed two stiff lefts to the nose. McCormick landed a hard right with a straight right on the belt, but was too far away to have much effect.

Round 18—They rushed to the usual clinch and exchanged rights and lefts to the body. In the breakaway Ruhlin landed a stiff left to the face. They sparred for a while and then rushed to another clinch. McCormick was short with a left to the neck with a stiff right and a moment later landed a light left to the body as they came to a clinch. They indulged in a little time in fighting without much damage on either side. Both men sparred lively at the bell.

Round 8—McCormick stepped in with a hard left to the jaw. Both men were very slow. McCormick sent a hard right around Ruhlins' head. Ruhlin landed a left to the wind and a stiff right landed a left jab to the face. McCormick landed a straight right to the wind and the men clinched. Ruhlin reached his man with a light left to the body at the bell.

Round 9—They came to a clinch with no damage done. Then there was a mix-up in the centre of the ring, both landing rights and lefts to the body. McCormick landed a hard right to the nose as they came in a clinch. They indulged in a little body fighting without much damage. Gus landed two stiff lefts to the nose. McCormick landed a hard right with a straight right on the belt, but was too far away to have much effect.

Round 10—They rushed to the usual clinch and exchanged rights and lefts to the body. In the breakaway Ruhlin landed a stiff left to the face. They sparred for a while and then rushed to another clinch. McCormick was short with a left to the neck. Ruhlin then waited for McCormick's leads and countered them. The Ruhlin punches began to tell.

McCormick's Ear Exploded.

In the twelfth round McCormick's ear exploded, and after that the Texan fighting spirit seemed to be thoroughly aroused.

Umpires—McCarthy and Sheridan.

A big holiday crowd will journey to the Back Bay park this afternoon when the White Sox arrive to line up with the Champs, and some of the hottest games that have yet taken place in the home schedule of the Hub favorites are on the card.

After dealing the Highlanders some hard knocks the Sox will come ready to hand out the same kind of treatment to the Champs, but they are overestimating their chances and will run into some hard usage if they think they are going to have something soft handed to them.

After taking three out of four from the Tigers the Champs are in trim to give the Sox some bumps that they will remember; but the contests promise to be the limit of premier diamond work and the result will tell the story of the East against the West in the run for the pennant.

Big Bill Dineen will probably be the officiating slabman for the Champs, and the big fellow was never going better than he is just at present, which is pleasant for the fans who are counting on every game just now.

The downfall of the Tigers in the last game of the series was a big solace to the Sox, but the Westerners died hard, and the Champs were so uncertain in the field that the outcome was somewhat in doubt till it was found that George Winter could be depended on to pull it out, no matter what happened behind him.

Winter pitched one of his best games of the season and as the struggle advanced he grew more effective.

There were two players was did a lot toward gaining the victory, and they were Burkett and Criger.

Burkett redeemed himself in the estimation of the fans by hammering out a home run and getting a hit that brought in another and Criger sent in a couple of runs on a timely hit. The fifth run was a gift.

FIGHT BY ROUNDS IS DESCRIBED BY EXPERT

Special to the Boston American.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—They sparred for an opening. Ruhlin missed a hard right and was countered with right left to the body. Ruhlin rushed his man to the ropes and McCormick dropped to his hands to get out of a close corner. Ruhlin landed a stiff right and left to the body. McCormick reached the wind with a hard left. McCormick was short with two hard lefts to the body. Ruhlin rushed McCormick to his corner and landed three stiff rights at the bell. There was not much fighting, but it was Ruhlin's round.

RUHLIN RUSHES.

Round 3—McCormick landed a light left to the wind, and they clinched. They exchanged light lefts to the face. Ruhlin rushed his man to the ropes and landed effectively. McCormick slipped to the floor to ducking a hard swing. They clinched with no damage. Gus landed a hard upper cut to the wind. McCormick reached the head with a hard right and received a stiff left to the body in return. In a mix-up McCormick landed a light left on the head. The bell found them sparring.

Round 4—McCormick landed a hard left on the nose and was in short with a straight left to face. Ruhlin reached the head with a light left. They clinched with no damage. McCormick landed a hard left to face. Ruhlin rushed his man across the ring to a neutral corner, and McCormick was dragged to his knees to avoid punishment. Ruhlin landed a stiff right to body as the men clinched.

FIGHTERS ARE TIRED.

Round 8—McCormick stepped in with a hard left to the jaw. Both men were very slow. McCormick sent a hard right around Ruhlins' head. Ruhlin landed a left to the wind and a stiff right landed a left jab to the face. McCormick landed a straight right to the wind and the men clinched. Ruhlin reached his man with a light left to the body at the bell.

Round 9—They came to a clinch with no damage done. Then there was a mix-up in the centre of the ring, both landing rights and lefts to the body. McCormick landed a hard right to the nose as they came in a clinch. They indulged in a little body fighting without much damage. Gus landed two stiff lefts to the nose. McCormick landed a hard right with a straight right on the belt, but was too far away to have much effect.

Round 10—They rushed to the usual clinch and exchanged rights and lefts to the body. In the breakaway Ruhlin landed a stiff left to the face. They sparred for a while and then rushed to another clinch. McCormick was short with a left to the neck. Ruhlin then waited for McCormick's leads and countered them. The Ruhlin punches began to tell.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 12.—Irving Wilhelm will probably pitch for the Tenneyites against the Reds this afternoon. The ex-Pirate, as he appeared against the Pirates last week, is in fine form, and should be able to give Kelley's team a hard run for victory.

Check will most likely be the Red's card. He is also in splendid shape.

The Bostons are now playing a first class game. They have won four out of the last six battles. At that, they should have the entire six games to their credit.

Fred Tenney says that he knows where to get a few players who would strengthen the team wonderfully.

"Just three or four changes will make our team a first-class one," said Manager Tenney. "As I haven't been authorized by the prospective management to make any changes, I have let matters rest entirely as they were.

"Mr. Dunn, the head of the new syndicate, has talked with me on several occasions, but as I have not even been given a hint that I would be in charge next season, it was not my place to give ideas and suggestions relative to the team of 1906, and so I have kept mum.

"Mr. Dunn has assured me that he has only asked the terms of one man to manage the team next season, and that any other reports that may become current regarding the management of the Bostons are with out foundation. But of course I would like to manage the team again, but that is a matter entirely in the hands of Mr. Dunn."

WANTS GANS TO MEET GARDNER

BALTIMORE, Aug. 12.—Manager Al Herford received a telegram from Alex Greggains yesterday, asking him if Joe Gans would meet Jimmy Gardner before the San Francisco Athletic Club the latter part of the present month. After reading the message through twice Manager Al smiled and, shaking his head, muttered very audibly: "Nix, nary, nix. But then," he said, "there is nothing doing this month in that line. The Champ says he would take no trip to the Coast with Gans to meet Jimmy Gardner unless he is guaranteed $500 for expenses. I made two trips out West with Gans to meet the man who knocked out Rude Turner last week, and both times Jimmy Gardner got cold feet, and Gans and I were out our time and money. If Greggains will guarantee us $500 in case we get there and Gardner again flunks out of the meeting, then I will talk about a match between Gans and Gardner for next month, but I am not going to make any more long jumps, expecting to have a match, and then be thrown down by Gardner at the last minute."

CONN. LEAGUE LEADERS ARE IN REVOLT

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 12.—The Holyoke nine, the leaders of the Connecticut League, are in open revolt as a vote passed at the special meeting, at which the team was ordered to play over the game with Springfield, which Umpire Smink ordered forfeited to Holyoke last Wednesday because of vicious actions by Springfield's second baseman, Fitzpatrick.

At the special meeting, by a vote of 5 to 4, Holyoke was ordered to appear next Tuesday afternoon to re-play the match.

President Madison of the club said today: "We hereby serve notice that we won't play, and we won't pay the $100 fine which is prescribed for not appearing.

For the first time in its history the Connecticut League turned down its organizer and veteran secretary, Jim O'Rourke, and by the action of last night O'Rourke is put in the position of fighting the league.

JOE M'GINNITY MAY MANAGE THE CARDINALS

Special to the Boston American.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12.—The Cardinals have an opportunity to secure "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity of the New York Giants as their next pitcher, according to developments at League park, where the Giants are playing. The announcement came from Ted Kennedy, just arrived from New York, who claims that he comes as McGinnity's representative, at the latter's request, to suggest to President Robinson of the Cardinals that McGinnity be engaged on the Cardinals and made manager of the team.

Kennedy and McGinnity had a two-hours' conference and Kennedy is to see Robinson at once and lay the proposition before him.

CONN. LEAGUE RESULTS.

At New London—Holyoke 1, New London 0 (14 innings).

At Springfield—Springfield 8, Meriden 2 (first game); Springfield 1, Meriden 0 (second game).

At Hartford—Hartford 4, Norwich 6 (first game); Hartford 1, Norwich 0 (second game).

At Bridgeport—New Haven 2, Bridgeport 1.

SAWYER TO PLAY H. C. EGAN IN GOLF MATCH

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—After exceptionally exciting golf in the eleventh national tournament of Champion H. Chandler Egan and D. E. Sawyer, both Chicagoans, survived to play the finals over thirty-six holes at the Wheaton links to-day.

Champion H. Chandler Egan gained the right to defend his title by going through the third and semi-final rounds like a machine. He defeated Harold Weber of Toledo 4 up and 3 to play, in the morning, 2 up and 1 to play, after going to the extra hole in the afternoon.

It was left for the other side of the draw to furnish the greatest duel to be had, when W. C. Fownes of Pittsburg, twice the former national and British champion, Walter J. Travis, in a hard fought match was lost only at the thirteenth hole. In the afternoon Mr. Fownes was unable to meet successfully the great golf put up by Ned Sawyer, and was defeated, 2 up.

Weber early in the day made himself a factor by defeating F. M. Byers of Pittsburg, twice runner-up in national tourneys, 3 up, 2 to play, while Sawyer's victory over A. L. White removed the only Boston man left, the holder of the intercollegiate championship, by the score of 3 up, 1 to play.

MOTOR-CYCLE EXPERTS RACE AT RIVER PARK

Charles River Park took a new lease of life yesterday when the fast motor-cyclists arrived there in force, put their machines and got accustomed to the high banks before the big risk their lives during the speed in the championship races which will be held here this afternoon under the auspices of the Federation of American Motorcyclists.

The racing undoubtedly will be the fastest ever seen over here, not excepting the best work done by racing automobiles. Even the first heat, Charles River Park will be no place for a tyro to ride, with heavy dangers for when the dizzy banks and short stretches are taken at the speed of a mile a minute there is about blase waiver with excitement and little breath.

Herbert Lytle, Bert Short, Jake Des Rochiers, L. E. French, Libby, Wyatt, Ben Kingsley and a host of other crack riders will arrive to-day, and even the trailing spins this afternoon is well worth the watching.

Kingsley will drive the four-cylinder French motor-cycle brought to this country by Albert Champion and upon which he made the celebrated mile on Charles River Park, covering the distance in 55 2-5 seconds on Sept. 7, 1903. Kingsley believes that he will do better, and the two-cylinder men back their machines to trim the French product.

BE STYLISH---LEARN THE NEW "CATERPILLAR CRAWL"

It's Brand New and Easily Outdoes the Kangaroo Gait

THE caterpillar crawl—yes, here it is, and doesn't it make you shiver to look at it—just like a caterpillar. It's like a modified kangaroo walk."

Miss Mignonette, Kokin, the graceful dancer, who is at Keith's Theatre this week, walked in front of the camera in Marceau's Studio. With an indescribable, sinuous change, in her lissome body, Miss Kokin assumed the picturesque attitude of the latest fashionable walk—the "caterpillar crawl," as it has been aptly termed.

"Ugh! I look just like a caterpillar, I know," declared Miss Kokin, pausing in front of the camera.

"But even that is better than the drooping walk, as some call it. That is the gait that Miss Ethel Barrymore seems to be trying to introduce. See—"

The rounded, white shoulders drooped forward, the whole body seemed just about to collapse, an absurd look of helplessness came on the mobile face.

"Catch me, catch me quick, somebody. Oh, I shall faint; I know I shall. Dear me, I've had such a turn."

The mischievous dancer looked for all the world as though she was just too delicate and despairing for any use—a veritable Lydia Languish.

"Isn't that ridiculous," she said; "reviving that guilt and bearing that the fine young ladies of one hundred years ago thought was the proper thing. They were so refined, poor, dear things, that they wouldn't seem healthy for all the world."

"Oh, it's not so bad as all that, is it?" she was asked in protest.

"Isn't it now?" she rejoined. "I've seen some girls on the street with that walk, and they are actually too funny for anything. Imagine a girl who can dance fifteen miles a night and play golf all day, putting on any such airs as that!"

"Well, what is your idea of a suitable walk, Miss Kokin?"

"Just walk, that's all," she laughed merrily. "I'll tell you, I think Mrs. Clarence Mackay has about the right idea, though even she carries it a trifle too far in that 'hypnotic walk' she is encouraging.

"You know, you just walk along pretty nearly natural, only the body is poised forward a little more than ordinary. The arms hang naturally. The chin is held a little up, and the eyes are kept looking straight ahead—that's where the name 'hypnotic' comes in, it gives you a little the look of a person in a trance. See?"

Miss Kokin paced to and fro steadily, slowly, with her eyes looking straight ahead, as though she saw something in the next world, not in this.

"That far-away look may do for the country, but it's risky when you have to watch for autos, I can tell you. But outside of that it's all right."

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My father had a young man in his employ for two years and always treated him like an own child, and I fell in love with him. One day last month my father gave him some money with which to pay a bill, and he has disappeared. I still love him, but his yacht was at Marseilles, wasn't she?

"Yes—the Crystabel. We left here there."

"But I hear," said Dick Menzies, "that Talbot is in Boston. I've seen his name several times during the last few days."

"Really—oh, I should so much like to meet him again!" the girl exclaimed. "It would be so nice, renew this unpleasant feeling which has taken possession of me. Nothing ought to be easier," he said. "I will arrange it. But don't let us talk of him now. We have so many other things to discuss, so much more important. Will you, Mary, my darling, consent to cancel out the plans our father and I have made?"

She looked very distressed, and gave him a look of dumb appeal.

"Is it really necessary?" she asked. "It is

The Simple Way

out of a difficulty," he said.

"But marriage is such a terribly serious thing, Dick!"

"I know, but——"

"And irrevocable. Ought we—you and I—to rush into it so precipitately?"

"The circumstances are unusual," he said.

"But they do not alter the fact. Once we are married—well, there will be no going back."

"I don't want to go back!" he cried, enthusiastically. "What an idea!"

"But is it wise?" she said, quite, with quiet intensity, "that it is quite possible that I may?"

"Mary!"

"I mean that if—oh, I don't know what I mean; only this haunting fear, that I have no fear, but really a great and loathing hope, that Stephen is not dead after all, makes me so uncertain of myself."

"You mean that you don't want to—to marry me?"

"It isn't that, I don't want to rush matters. I want to wait a little."

"To postpone the evil day—eh?"

He could not restrain a little bitter laugh.

"Don't, Dick!" she pleaded. "That is hardly fair, and it isn't a bit like you."

He murmured an apology. Her reluctance was so unexpected. He had taken so much for granted.

"Shall we leave it, then, for the present?" he asked.

"I would rather," she replied.

"And—and risk the danger with regard to your father?" he ventured, a little unworthily of him.

She winced.

"I was not thinking of that," she said. "I will speak to my father."

"And when shall I know?" he asked.

"To-morrow," she answered.

NOVEL BROOCH FASTENER

THERE can be few members of the fair sex who have not sighed for some one to evolve a really secure type of brooch pin—one that will not come undone at unexpected moments and leave them mourning the loss of their favorite ornaments. Consequently, the new invention which takes the form of an absolutely secure brooch fastener represents a veritable boon.

It consists of a pin with a screw at the back end—a screw which does not in the least interfere with the pin passing through the material, while, after being turned round two or three times, it cannot under any circumstances loosen itself or come undone. It is, in short, a most perfect safeguard against losing any brooch fitted with it, and one has only to see it to applaud its extreme simplicity.

SCARLET LIES

By the Author of Married to Mystery

CHAPTER CXLV.—Continued

"AND we've got to be married, haven't we?"

"I suppose so some day, but——"

"Then why not at once?"

"That's nonsense, Dick," she interrupted. "You're simply beating about the bush. Something unusual has taken place. I insist on hearing everything!"

"Well," said the unhappy Dick Menzies, "your father has told me everything."

"That means nothing to me," she said, "because I know nothing."

"And there's no earthly reason why you ever should," he retorted. "Still, you know well enough the position as regards Morley Darch!?"

"Yes."

"Then why need we go into the matter further?"

"Because I insist."

Dick Menzies looked most uncomfortable.

"You see," he said, "Morley Darch is in Paris——"

"Thank goodness for that!"

"He practically fled the country as a result of my information to the police of his disgraceful attempt to threaten and blackmail me."

"The Coward!

That is just the thing I should expect him to do."

"And," continued the young soldier, "your father thinks that if once we were married——"

"He would be safe—eh?"

"Yes; he and you and all the family."

"So you are going to be the victim—the means of saving us all?"

"Don't talk like that, Mary. You are cruel. You know how I love you—you must. You are all my life—my love. It will be the happiest day of my life when I take you away as my wife. Don't say anything cruel and unkind and nasty things about my being a victim——"

"I apologize, Dick," she said, impulsively. "I didn't mean to hurt you—you, who have been so good to us all."

"Let me go on," said Menzies. "The position is this, and your father realizes it. If once we are married without his knowing anything about it until it is all over, Morley Darch will have no further object in persecuting you and your father. But, quite apart from all that," he exclaimed impulsively, as he saw the shadow deepen on the girl's face, "I want you, Mary! I want to have the right to look after you and protect you and love you. I want you to be my wife, and every day's delay makes me more and more impatient. Don't you understand? Why should we wait? Why do you hesitate? Quite apart from anything else, I would ask you the same question and urge you to do the same thing. Believe me when I tell you that."

"I do, Dick," she said, gently; "but you don't quite understand the position from my point of view."

"Oh, yes, I do!" he said, quickly, quite set in it."

She shook her head and smiled faintly.

"No, Dick, you don't," she said. "I've been thinking matters over very much since you left us at Marseilles, and more particularly after—after something that occurred at Marseilles."

"What occurred at Marseilles," he asked dimly.

She did not answer for a few moments. As a matter of fact, she did not want to answer the question at all, or discuss the thing which was in her mind, and which had been constantly haunting her all the way home.

The Poignant Memory.

of the voice of the mysterious cowled monk of the bal masque on board the yacht Seafoam—the strange Mr. Talbot, whom nobody seemed to know, and who conjured up such vivid memories of other days.

That there was something unusual about the whole affair she was bound to believe, Judith had noticed the same thing. Fergus of late she had refused to discuss the matter. Then there had been Mr. Fergus Braine's unexpected visit, and the alarming suggestions he had made.

His manner on that night had been incomprehensible mysteries. True, Judith Mort had been speaking to him, and may have put the idea into his head. She remembered also keeping her head looked at her when he said:

I wonder whether it has ever struck you that it is quite within the bounds of coincidence, reasoning and assumption that Stephen Holland may still be alive?"

Coming as it did immediately upon her strange experience with Mr. Talbot, the Francisco Friar, it struck an uncanny note to her heart.

"Alive?" she had gasped. "But Stephen is dead!"

"You forget," Fergus Braine had retorted, solemnly, "that they have never yet found his body."

Again and again she had asked herself what those strange words of that unusual man meant, and she had tried hard to comfort herself by repeating Fergus Braine's parting words:

"A thousand thanks!" he had said. "Meantime, dear young lady, let me assure you, for your own peace of mind, that you need have no fear concerning your father. I am acting in his interests, and I think there is no doubt that I shall be able to satisfactorily arrange matters."

Whether he meant what he said or not, Mary Armstrong could not help remembering the words.

A long silence reigned between them. A hundred thoughts were flashing in rapid succession through the girl's mind. To tell Dick Menzies what she wanted to tell him she knew would only hurt him unnecessarily, and, in addition, make herself appear ridiculous in his eyes; and yet she felt that she must tell him.

"What Happened at Marseilles.

Mary?" he asked again. "Don't keep me any longer in suspense. I must know. You are so mysterious; I can't make you out, darling. Surely nothing could have occurred that would make you look any differently upon me?"

"No, Dick; that is quite true," she answered quietly. "But what did happen has somehow or other—I can't explain—altered my opinion of things—changed, as it were, my whole outlook."

"What do you mean, child?" asked Dick Menzies, with growing alarm. "You speak so strangely!"

Then, in rather halting and embarrassed tones, she told him all about the yacht, and the mysterious cowled monk, and Mr. Talbot. Dick Menzies listened attentively and without interruption until she had finished.

"And so you see, Dick," she said frankly, as she held her hand upon his, "I brought it all back to me so vividly. It was almost as if I were talking to poor Stephen again, and something I haven't been able to get it out of my mind. Oh, Dick, suppose—only just suppose what Mr. Fergus Braine said were true!"

"What absolute nonsense!" exclaimed Menzies impatiently. "My dear Mary, what can you be thinking about?"

"Do you know Mr. Talbot?" she asked.

"No; but I know of him," he replied. "I did not know that he was supposed to resemble poor Stephen in any way. By the way, his yacht was at Marseilles, wasn't she?"

"Yes—the Crystabel. We left here there."

"But I hear," said Dick Menzies, "that Talbot is in Boston. I've seen his name several times during the last few days."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Points Out That the Human Family Might Learn Something From the Example of a Horse

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1903, by American-Journal Examiner.

JIM KEY is a horse, but he is doing more for the elevation of thought than half the human family is doing, because he is illustrating what love and kindness can do for an animal.

He is called the most wonderful horse in the world; he has been so carefully educated that he reads, writes, spells, counts and makes change; tells the time and uses the cash register.

He made more money on the Pike than all the other shows in St. Louis. It is said of him that he never has been sick; always takes especial delight in his work; seems eager to learn, and no actor ever was prouder of making a bit than is Jim when playing before a large house. His appreciation of applause is one of his most human traits, and sometimes when he has a small audience he does not act so well, and really seems to feel as if he was not being appreciated.

And all these accomplishments are the result of Love and Patience and Kindness on the part of his trainer, Dr. Key, a colored man, born in slavery.

An Object Lesson

JIM appeared in Cincinnati, Ohio, not long ago. Every school was closed that the children might see this educated animal, and the following testimonial was signed by all the principals:

We, the undersigned principals of the Public Schools of Cincinnati, having witnessed the remarkable exhibition given by "Beautiful Jim Key," the Educated Horse, take pleasure in testifying that it is indeed the most remarkable and interesting performance of the kind we have ever witnessed.

We consider it the grandest object lesson that could be presented to the children of our schools, as it teaches them as no book or lecture could do that animals think and can be taught by patience and kindness to do almost anything.

We believe this object lesson will be of lasting benefit to the thousands of children in the Cincinnati schools who have witnessed this performance, and that it will make them more considerate and kind to animals in the future.

We recommend this grand object lesson to all principals and teachers of other cities, urging them, if possible, for the education and moral benefit of the children under their charge, to arrange so that they will also be able to see this wonderful educated horse.

We believe that it will be of lasting benefit to every child and well worth the time and money it may cost to see it.

Offered a Prize

HERE is another testimonial:

The Women's Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals desires to offer to the children of the schools of Philadelphia a number of prizes in the shape of medals, one of which shall be given to the school in each school who shall write the best composition on the topic, "What Patience and Kindness Will Accomplish With Animals," as shown in the exhibition of "Beautiful Jim Key."

The society makes this offer because it recognizes in the marvelous exhibition of "Beautiful Jim Key," the educated horse now at the Export Exposition, the best object lesson it can offer the children that will make a lasting impression on their minds, showing what patience and kindness will do in teaching and caring for animals.

It is encouraging to read of these proofs of the growing intelligence of the world, for there are many things which discourage and dishearten us as we move about among our cruel, unfeeling kind.

The shameful sport of shooting live pigeons from traps is being stopped by law; but the opposition to this law from men of wealth and position makes one sorry for the world.

In New Jersey two members of the Riverton Gun Club violated the law, against this cruel sport; they were arrested and fined. A writ of error was secured and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court.

Slow Progress

CHIEF JUSTICE GUMMERE and Justices Fort and Garretson heard the argument, and the opinion of the Court sustaining the law is unanimous. It was contended that the act was a curtailments of the rights of property, in that a man had a right to use pigeons which were his property as he pleased.

The Court decided that the rights of property were inoperative when the owner exercised them in a cruel manner.

All this indicates progress; but how pitiful to realize that intelligent men still imagine that "the right of property" means the privilege of misusing, maltreating or torturing any living thing.

"How was when a man could beat his wife and child and no one dared interfere because he owned them; and until glorious Henry Bergh arose and made the indifferent minded world listen to the rights of our dumb kin no man could be hindered from any abuse he chose to bestow upon his animals.

All honor to the memory of this great soul.

If you are the mother of children tell them about Henry Bergh. If you do so know his story look it up and be prepared to teach your sons and daughters to emulate him in having the courage of their convictions.

No President of the United States save Lincoln perhaps left such an indelible impress upon the world for good as Henry Bergh left. Tell your children about his work and talk to them of the miracle it is possible to accomplish with animals through Love and Patience.

WALKING GOOD FOR WOMEN

THERE is no other exercise as thoroughly invigorating and good for every woman as walking.

People who think they cannot walk drag one foot after the other slowly and ungainly and carry the body in a painfully strained position, which abuses some muscles and leaves some others dormant.

This would prove a strain on even an athlete.

To derive benefit from the exercise the step must be light and elastic, swinging the body as the one leg to the other that its weight is not felt.

The harmonious play of the muscles imparts a supple grace and litheness that is felt mentally as well as physically and produces a healthy glow. This manner of walking strengthens the whole body and gives tone to the nerves.

The gait, to be beautiful, must be individual. That action must be in harmony with a person's weight and physique.

The step should be regulated by the height. A tall person looks very foolish taking little choppy steps, and a little woman makes herself ridiculous by attempting to stride along with steps that are meant for a six-footer.

To reap the fullest advantage from the exercise of walking one must be comfortably clothed, and particular attention must be given to the shoes.

A short skirt that is light in weight and flaring at the bottom is the proper dress for the body, a pair of easily fitting shoes and one is dressed to thoroughly enjoy the exercise.

Do not try to take too long steps and tire yourself out. Walk easily and naturally, throwing all the weight on the ball of the foot. The leg must be held straight but not stiff, and the ball of the foot and heel should touch the ground almost together.

The child with heelless shoes should step so that the ball of the foot will reach the ground first.

The shoulders have a slight natural movement, in opposition to the feet, but exercising or twisting them should be avoided.

The arms may swing from the shoulder with the natural movement of the body, but should not be violently swung as is frequently done.

There is no other exercise that will do for a man what walking does. Besides attaining every part of the body, it relaxes, and the tension of the nerves.

When women thoroughly understand how much the perfect living thing and grace of their movements add to their charms they will appreciate the value of the exercise and indulge more freely in it.

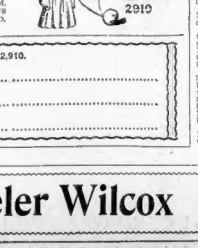
A Pretty Frock for a Child



No. 2,910.

No. 2,910—Many are the little dresses needed by the child in its continuous round of play. Mothers welcome most cordially those frocks that are simple in design, new of construction and that give comfort and freedom to the child. Such is the one illustrated here. The fulness is gathered to a shallow yoke, which may be quite hidden by a deep collar if so desired. The collar can be trimmed or plain, preferably the latter, if the frock is intended for constant service. A round neck and short or sleeves may also be used if summer time comfort. The little dress can be made of any of the pretty washing fabrics from gingham to dimity or Persian lawn, while serge or challis are equally appropriate. The pattern requires 2¼ yards of 36-inch material in the medium size.

Pattern No. 2,910 is in five sizes, ½, 1, 2, 4 and 6 years.

"I will give $50 to the Newboys' Scholarship Fund of Boston.

"(Signed) ALBERT A. POPE."

Being of generous size and coming from a distance, the gift occasioned a decided stir in newsboy circles and the little fellows talked about it as it spread through the city.

When ex-Mayor McNamee of Cambridge got in touch with the Newsboy Scholarship plan he said unhesitatingly:

"I heartily approve of that. I approve of the support being afforded me by the AMERICAN to contribute to it, for I am a newsboy myself."

Thus the newsboys received a gift of $25 from the ex-Mayor of Cambridge.

To the check for $25 donated by Bernard M. Wolf, "My Clothier," was appended the following:

"Editor BOSTON AMERICAN: We are pleased to hand you our check for $25 to be applied to the Newsboys' Scholarship Fund. The cause is certainly a most worthy one and offers splendid change for the ambitious to secure a higher education. Such acts as these tend to make the community in which we live better because the young men who are fortunate enough to gain scholarships in this way repay in many cold by acts of good citizenship, loyalty and patriotism. The AMERICAN should be congratulated and is indeed to be commended for the approval of all citizens. Yours very truly, "(Signed) BERNARD M. WOLF, "My Clothier."

A member of a well-known Washington street carpet firm presented the Newsboys' Scholarship Fund with a $5 check with the modest understanding that it should be credited to a friend.

Congratulations upon the success of the plan have been received by the newsboys from many quarters, including the Newsboys' Union, of Lowell, Mass., of Thursday night.

The amount desired is $5,000, of which more than one-third is now subscribed. Many business men are already considering the matter, and it is only a question of how much they will be able to spare to this particular use, and where they will get the head from. It is expected that the dollar and half dollar gifts will pour in soon. The Newsboys' Union desires it understood that while their fund for the money is considered too small, they make their offerings in the spirit and function of co-rent, and know the value of money, whether the sum be large or small. The good will in every instance will be accepted with the gratitude it merits. It is expected that hundreds from outside of Greater Boston will participate by paying what their means will allow.

VT. MAN HELD FOR BIGAMY

Curtis E. Calhoun of No. 23 Yeaman street, Revere, has been arrested and taken to Vermont on a charge of bigamy. He is alleged to have married Eloida Mazoon of Coventry, Vt., December 24, 1887, and Mabel C. Payne in Revere about five years ago, with whom he has since been living and keeping house.

Calhoun was arrested on requisition papers. He went to Newport, Vt., with Sheriff Edward F. Miles of that place, and did not seem to fear the result.

Calhoun was arrested some time ago on a charge of bigamy, but there is said now to be no question over that case.

Mrs. Calhoun of Revere is a very pretty young woman, and is heartbroken at her husband's arrest. She says she is sure her husband a bigamist, and says it is all a mistake. Calhoun expects to be back in Boston to-day.

SURGEON HAS YELLOW FEVER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—Surgeon G. M. Berry of the Marine Hospital staff has been stricken with yellow fever. Dr. Berry is a Texan and was one of the first to reach New Orleans to fight the plague. Because he had been in the camp he was thought to be immune. He was put in charge of work in the originally infected area, where he did yeoman service in disinfection. He was removed to the Quarantine, where special yellow fever wards have been provided.

Patterson, La., has thirty cases of yellow fever and chancellor will be sold to be needed. Three yellow fever nurses have been sent to Patterson by the State Board of Health.

The official report on the yellow fever situation for the day is as follows:

New cases, 6; total cases to date, 809; deaths, 9; total deaths to date, 153; new suspected, 12; total suspected to date, 161.

Surgeon White of the Marine Hospital service is much surprised in the number of new cases of fever, and expects a number more to come there will be a large crop of new cases brought to light daily. The people of New Orleans have made up their minds to await in patience the results of the federal campaign, which is now fairly in swing.

PERRY TIFFANY AND MISS THOMPSON WED

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Authoritative announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Olive Welling Thompson, daughter of the late Queen of the Sandwich Islands, son of Mrs. George Tiffany and grandson of Chief Justice Benjamin R. REAL OLD TIME MINSTREL SHOW COMES TO PARAGON PARK

ALABAMA COMEDY FOUR.

A MEMBER OF THE FOUR.

NEXT WEEK'S ATTRACTION AT PARAGON.

A Novel Feature for Next Week Among Tickets in Sunday's Issue.

"Dragon's Den," "Animal Show" and "Scenic Railway" the Other Entertainments.

The first performance of the new attraction at Paragon Park, the "South Before the War," will be given Monday afternoon.

The fifty genuine Southern darkeys taking part in this old-fashioned performance have all arrived at the Park and have been attending the final rehearsals. The new stage on the grounds formerly occupied by the Wild West is up and all accessories have been installed, ready for the first public production next week.

The old South before the war is one of the shows to which admission is given Sunday or Tuesday on the free tickets printed in the to-morrow's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. In addition the BOSTON AMERICAN tickets can attend the opening performance Monday if they so desire, or they can wait over till Tuesday, if more convenient.

The "South Before the War," is just what it's name implies. It is not like the usual run of modern darkey entertainments, composed of 1905 rag-time and equally recent "coon" songs.

It is a revival of the real, old-time Southern plantation life, with all the songs, music and dances incidental to the good old days of "Befo' de war."

The performers are genuine darkies, not colored by burnt corks. They are all dancers and musicians, either vocal or instrumental or both. They know the old-time songs, the "Pigeon Wing," "Juba" and "Sand's Lope" and such characteristic dances.

The "South Before the War" is a continuous show, too. You can stay in as long as you please and there is always something to see. It is an elaborate performance. Much expense was incurred in preparing it and the management of Paragon Park feels fortunate in securing it for its patrons.

LABOR NEWS

UNION PRINTED TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL 96

A quarter of a century in the carpenter industry is reviewed in this month's anniversary number of the "Carpenter" by General Secretary Frank Duffy, as follows:

"The growth of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has been remarkable, indeed," he says. "From a mere handful organized in August, 1881, it has increased to 1,793 local unions in August, 1905, showing a membership of 170,42 in the gross or to 161,205 in good standing. This gives it the second place in point of size in the United States, Canada, Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands. In the Southern States the colored men working at the trade have taken hold of the organization willingly, resulting in the formation of many unions of the carpenters."

Two Boston men have been general secretaries of Brotherhood since its formation—William Huston Sayward, 1883-88, and Frank J. Sheids, who is now Local Union 33 organizer for the Brotherhood. Brotherhood publishes interesting article on "Has the Labor Movement Benefited or Retarded the Cause of Personal Liberty?" The anniversary number also contains an excellent likeness of Mr. Shields.

LAUNDRY DRIVERS' UNION.

The largest attendance of the year was present at the last meeting of Laundry Wagon Drivers' Union No. 698, at Hollis Hall.

Business Agent J. P. Canty reported that the Globe Towel Supply Company had been taken off the unfair list, and that all members were now in good standing. A committee was appointed to visit the bartenders, barbers and grocery clerks' unions in the interest of the Labor Day parade.

After two years of hard fighting, the Laundry Wagon Drivers' Union, through its business agent, has brought three of the largest laundries in New England into the union, and they now both the inside help and the drivers are all working in the union shops. It is expected that by the next meeting a large local supply company of which Mr. Canty is also the drivers wear-ing the union button.

UNIFORMS FOR TEAMSTERS.

Uniforms for the Labor Day parade will be distributed by the teamsters' unions today and tomorrow.

Local No. 25, which expects to have 4,000 in its ranks, will distribute uniforms to-morrow afternoon at Brotherhood Hall. Uniforms will be given out to the members of Coal Teamsters' Union No. 68 at a special meeting this afternoon at Wells Memorial building, and also at the regular meeting on Sunday afternoon in the same place. Uniforms will be distributed to members of Sand and Tar Carts' Drivers' Union Sunday night, and the Lumber Teamsters' Union Monday evening at Wells Memorial building. Market and Commission Men Teamsters' Union holds a special meeting Sunday afternoon at No. 9 Elm street to make arrangements for the parade.

LABOR NOTES.

President A. C. Fraley, Business Agent S. M. Lent and L. A. Gardner of Pattern Makers' Association left Monday for the national convention at Pittsburg which opens next week.

The board voted for Thomas E. Holmes of Carpenters' Union No. 97, which is being held at Arnold Garden tonight, to settle a dispute between mixers from the Charmaker Union.

The executive committee of No. 5 Y., N. B. and B. B. B. will hold an outing tomorrow at Nantasket Beach.

Peter W. Collins, John J. McLaughlin and R. J. Gallagher of No. 103 Bricklayers' Union, Dorchester, are delegates to the National convention of electrical workers at Worcester tomorrow.

NEW LIGHT THAT VELASQUEZ IS NOT ORIGINAL

Paris Sends Out Statement That Receipt of Famous Painter Is Found.

Cable despatches from Paris that a receipt from the painter, Velasquez, for a portrait painting of Philip IV. of Spain has been found in the family papers of the Duchess of Villahermosa of Madrid is cited as fresh argument to-day by the art critics who have declared that the painted "Velasquez" for which the Boston Museum of Fine Arts paid $40,000 was not an "original" Velasquez.

According to the Paris despatches Senor Mellida, Madrid Spanish art critic, has discovered in the Villahermosa archives a genuine receipt, signed in Velasquez' handwriting, showing that the famous painter delivered to the House of Villahermosa three portrait paintings in 1642. One was of Philip IV. of Spain, another of the Count Duke de Olivares and the third of "A personage."

Accepted as Genuine.

In the Villahermosa galleries to-day are portraits of Philip IV. and Olivares, both accepted by the Spanish art critics as being genuine works of Velasquez. If this be the case, the Paris despatches say, then the Philip IV. portrait in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts cannot be the original Velasquez. If it can be neither a copy of the original Velasquez or a work of some other painter who happened to paint after the Velasquez style without necessarily intending to copy him.

The genuineness of the Boston "Velasquez" has been a vexed question ever since last Fall. It was purchased for the Museum on the advice of Dr. Denman W. Ross of Harvard, acting as agent for the Museum trustees.

When Dr. Ross was in Madrid last Fall he heard that Duque Fernesio Marie de Bourbon, a nobleman whose career was as checkered as his blood was blue, had a Philip IV. by Velasquez for sale. Dr. Ross saw the picture and recognized it as one he had seen previously exhibited for sale by Luis de Ocampo, a Madrid picture proprietor. There was some uncertainty as to the Prince or de Navas owning the picture.

Subject of Argument.

It no sooner arrived than it became the subject of a heated and technical argument as to its genuineness. A letter quoting European doubts was received here. Boston and New York art critics took sides, the question has never been satisfactorily settled.

Those affirming Dr. Ross's opinion that the painting was a real Velasquez included Frank W. Benson, Joseph de Camp, Philip Hale, Charles Hopkinson, William M. Paxton, J. Alden Weir of New York, Roger E. Fry of London and Jacques Maroin Sierra, Italy. Opponents who declared the Boston Art Museum had been fooled included Sir Cecil Smith, professor Charles H. Moore of Harvard, Professor Cossio, Dr. M. L. Gonzalez, Mr. Water Gay and Senor de Burrueta.

FIALA PARTY, SUPPLIES GONE, ATE WALRUS

Reduced to Desperate Straits Before They Were Rescued in Frozen North.

WEAKENED BY HARDSHIP

TROMSOE, Norway, Aug. 12.—The relief steamer Terra Nova, which succeeded in rescuing Anthony Fiala and the other members of the Ziegler polar expedition, arrived after an adventurous voyage, which at one time threatened to end in failure, owing to the thickness of the ice encountered.

On July 29 the Terra Nova reached Cape Dillon and found six members of the expedition safe and well. From this outpost sledges were dispatched to notify Mr. Fiala of the fortunate rescue of the arrival of the rescue ship.

The Terra Nova reached Cape Flora July 30 and found more members of the expedition. These had become weakened by the hardships they endured, and some of them were so ill that they could not have held out for another Winter.

The members of the Ziegler expedition tell a stirring story of their vain efforts to reach the pole. The expedition spent the first year in Teplitz Bay, where it deposited provisions and coal on the ice. In the severe weather of November, 1903, the ship America, which carried the Ziegler expedition, broke up and the provisions and coal were lost. The loss of the provisions was somewhat felt and but for the stores left by the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition in Teplitz Bay the men would have been in bad straits.

Ultimately the supply of provisions began to give out, and a painful journey southward was begun, the expedition living by reaching the depots at Cape Flora, Cape Dillon and Cape Britannia, from which they were distributed, and where they managed to eat the limited supplies by catches of walrus and bear.

FRENCH INDEMNITY IN "SHORE" DISPUTE

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company at Paris says that the arbitral tribunal appointed to consider the differences between England and France in regard to the rights of the two countries in Newfoundland has awarded the indemnity amounting to 5,000,000 francs in French boat owners, fishermen and others along the "French shore" of Newfoundland.

BELIEVED TO BE DEMENTED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—United States Minister Beaupre at Buenos Ayres cables the State Department the following particulars of the attempt to assassinate the President of Argentina yesterday:

"An attempt was made upon the life of President Manuel Quentina while he was driving in Retiro Park.

"Pinaus Viedie, a laborer, leaped from behind a monument with a drawn revolver. The President's aide jumped from the carriage and overpowered the man before he was able to shoot.

Why SHOULD the Coal Miners' Wages Be Reduced?

If the Men Should Submit They Would Disgrace Themselves and Treat Their Families Unjustly

There is talk of another coal strike—one on a bigger scale than the last.

Moral lectures are read to John Mitchell, president of the coal miners, and to the men whom he represents.

They are told what a terrible thing it is to have a coal strike, what suffering it brings to the poor, etc.

The moral lectures are fine. Lack of coal IS dreadful.

But lack of human liberty and human decency is worse even than lack of coal.

It is absolutely the duty of all the people, even if they pay more, even if they must shiver, to support the coal miners IF INJUSTICE FORCES THEM TO A FIGHT.

Remember that the miners do not ask for more money.

ALL THAT THEY ASK IS THAT THEIR PAY SHALL NOT BE REDUCED.

Unless the pay of the miners is reduced, the work of producing coal will go on as at present—the miners getting barely enough to live upon, the public paying a high price, and the thieves of the trusts that stand between the miners and the public still piling up vast fortunes.

An effort may be made to diminish the pay of the coal miners.

If such an effort is made, it will be based on the belief of the mine owners and the railroad owners that you, the ordinary people, will turn against the miners and fail to support them, for your own selfish reasons.

Every honest man who reads this paper should make up his mind that he will support the miners in their strike against the reduction of their pay, unless it can be shown that there is a REASON for such reduction. With public sentiment behind the miners, THERE WILL BE NO STRIKE.

Now, in the warm weather, before the fight comes on, you are asked to think the thing over.

Can you see any reason for reducing the pay of the men that dig out the coal?

The coal is there in the ground, where Nature placed it millions of years ago. The coal land is in the hands of the cunning schemers that have got hold of it.

Does that coal, which the trust owners did not make, and which they never saw, cost them any more to-day than it did last year? Certainly not.

Then there is no excuse for lowering wages on the ground that the COAL costs more. It is in the ground where Nature put it, thinking probably that she would benefit the whole of humanity—little thinking that she would fatten a few trust scoundrels, leaving millions to lack heat, and hundreds of thousands to work poorly paid.

Given the coal in the ground, there is nothing more to the coal business except HUMAN LABOR.

WORKMEN dig the holes that lead down to the coal veins. WORKMEN dig out the coal, haul it to the surface and load it on the cars.

OTHER WORKMEN unload the coal from the cars, put it on carts, bring it to your door, and put it in your cellar.

To this entire coal business, of which so much mystery is made, there is nothing at all except two things:

The COAL in the ground manufactured for all human beings many millions of years before the first man appeared on earth.

THE HUMAN LABOR THAT DISTRIBUTES THE COAL TO HUMAN BEINGS IN NEED OF HEAT.

On what ground will the sharks that get hold of the mines and own the railroads and work human beings for as little as they will take ask for a reduction in the wages of the men?

Will they charge the consumers of coal any less? No.

Then WHY should they diminish the pay of the men that dig out the coal and distribute it?

For such a cutting down of wages they have no excuse whatever, except this:

WHATEVER MONEY THE THIEVES OF THE COAL TRUST CAN TAKE OUT OF WORKINGMEN'S POCKETS, THEY WILL PUT IN THEIR OWN POCKETS.

The men that own the coal mines also own the railroads, and they regulate the price that the retailer must charge, fixing his profit at the minimum.

All along the line they are absolute dictators.

The desire is, all along the line, to add a little more to their own pilfering.

They plan now to get a little of the wages of some hundreds of thousands of coal miners—that would mean a great deal to them.

Take ten cents a day from the pay of five hundred thousand men—in a year you will have put in the pockets of the trust $15,650,000—a sum well worth stealing, in the estimation of the modern industrial pirate, even though it means that five hundred thousand ten-cent pieces every day are taken from the stomachs of wives and children.

Think over this impending coal strike now, before your own selfish desire for cheap coal clouds your mind. With which side will you sympathize?

Will you say: "I want no increase in the price of coal. I want to be warm to-night, no matter what happens to half a million men for years to come"?

Or will you say: "I will suffer, if necessary. I will pay more. I will stand a little cold, but I WON'T help the thieves that are trying to rob those miners. What little influence I have shall be used against the stealing of fifteen million dollars a year from a half million men that work hard and get little"?

Slain by Savages

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

THERE are still a few "savages" left upon the face of the earth. In certain sections of "Darkest Africa," I believe, as well as upon some of the islands of the South Seas, tribes of these belated members of the human race are still to be found in all their physical ugliness and wild, untamed ferocity.

Occasionally some traveller from the realms of civilization falls into the hands of these heartless monsters and is slain, as was the case recently with Mr. Henry Trumble, a brother of the famous Australian cricketer.

Possibly there are as many as a round hundred of civilized people killed every year by these graceless wretches, people the world can ill afford to lose, the majority of them being incalculably helpful to commerce, science and the other things upon which our human progress so greatly depends.

Against the cruelty of these savages of the Gilbert Islands, the New Hebrides and elsewhere in the South Seas, as well as in "Darkest Africa," we justly lift up our hands in holy horror.

The unreasoning brutes! The heartless fiends! to be slaying the harmless traveller in such ruthless fashion! to be so absolutely dead to every sense of the sacredness of human life!

But let us not forget the fact that there are savages and savages—savages in the New Hebrides and in the African jungles, and savages in enlightened, civilized, Christianized America, to go no further just now.

What is it to be a savage?

Is it to be uneducated and ignorant? Is it to be half clad and half housed and oftentimes half fed? Is it to be without the arts and sciences, the helps and appliances of the thing we call civilization? Or, finally, is it to be in a state of moral coma, dead, or but indifferently awake, to the sense of justice, to the sentiment of compassion, and to that spirit of brotherhood which should mark every man's feelings toward his fellow man?

Clearly, the latter. And that being the case, what a multitude of savages we have right here in this country, and how large is the army of the slain that goes down every year before the onslaughts of their barbaric methods!

It is stated, upon the highest authority, that the Rum Sellers annually slay between seventy and eighty thousand people.

The Railroad Owners kill and maim almost as many more.

The owners of the cramped, unsanitary tenement houses kill every year an army of men, women and children as large as that with which Grant began his great "Overland Campaign" against Lee.

Tens of thousands are poisoned every year by the fellows who are in the food adulteration business and in the manufacture of impure drugs.

The Coal Barons, the Mill Owners and the Trust Magnates, by low wages and oppression, by foul air and too long hours, by extortion and monopoly, slay multitudes every year.

The savages of "Darkest Africa" worship "Mumbo Jumbo"; the savages of the United States of America worship the Dollar; and of the two the American religion is much the more disastrous in its influence upon its followers.

While claiming to be civilized and Christianized, and while sending missionaries to preach our professed religion to the cannibalistic savages, inspired by the horrible spirit of our real religion—the religion of Greed—we are committing more cruelties every day than all Heathendom combined commits in a generation.

And there is this much to be said to the credit of the savages of the South Sea Isles—they don't know any better.

But we do. The cruelty of the savages of the United States is cold-blooded. They slay men, women and children simply because they love them less than they do the Gold which is their God!

The Peace Conference

By James J. Montague

KOMURA now will talk awhile with choicely chosen words
About the predatory ways of double eagle birds,
And Witte will readily reply with rough Slavonic raps,
Directed at the evil wiles of sundry little Japs:
Then Sato will hold forth awhile and Rosen may butt in,
While all the others sit around and wait their chance to chin.

For what's the use of conference
Unless the conferees
Can talk like campaign orators
And say whate'er they please?
Have they not come around the world
The dove of peace to stalk?
So let them be and leave them free
To talk, and talk, and talk.

But all the time, far, far away, across Manchuria's plain Oyama's chasing Linevitch with all his might and main.

Komura glibly will submit the Japanese demands
For all the coin the Czar has got and nearly all his lands,
And Witte will say in many words that if the Japs give in
He's sure the Czar will willingly extend the friendly fin,
While Sato, Rosen and the rest will join the talk, and each
Fill in such pauses that occur with many miles of speech.

For when there is a conference
The only thing to do
Is sit around a table while
You talk each other blue.
For tongues must wag and words must fly,
And neither never balk—
But both sit tight with all their might,
And talk, and talk, and talk.

Yet all the time Oyama camps on Linevitch's trail, Nor ever pauses on the field to read his Portsmouth mail.

Komura wants indemnity, and Witte has none to give;
Komura says he's sorry, but Japan has got to live.
Glum Witte replies that if the Japs will give him back his fleet
He will not make them suffer the results of their defeat.
Then Rosen will get up and talk, and Sato will orate,
And all the minor delegates will have some things to state.

For that's the way a conference
Is nearly always run—
The warring words like bullets fly,
And speech is never done.
Around the room the delegates
In noble frenzy walk,
While all four walls re-echo as
They talk, and talk, and talk.

But still Oyama fights away in far Manchuria, for He knows that it is up to him to end the talk and war.

Little Editorials from the People

WHY SHOULD MEN SWELTER?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Volumes have been written about women's Summer waists of the peek-a-boo variety. They have been criticised and condemned. Even ministers have considered it their especial duty to point out the indecency of such apparel. With the result that the women continue to peacefully, calmly and sensibly wear what to them means positive comfort.

To be forced, by the dictates of fashion, to go about with a heavy coat upon their shoulders at all times and in all places, regardless of the weather, as the men do, would not be tolerated by them.

It makes my blood boil to see them sweltering in clothing, as heavy as the women wear in Winter, when the thermometer is prancing about in the nineties. What sense is there in the demand that they shall dress so uncomfortably and foolishly? Who makes the demand? I am sure it is not the women. Every wife and mother would be glad to see her husband and son equipped for the intense heat which they are forced to endure while attending to business, in a sensible and comfortable manner.

WHAT HAVE VIOLINISTS TO SAY TO THIS?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

"Should the Violin be Taught in the Public Schools?" you ask above one of your Little Editorials from the People.

No, is the answer. Of all the soul-harrowing, heart-twisting, unholy and iniquitous noises the great round world has ever known the violin is the worst. It is a piercing, shrieking, lingering, heart-rending instrument of evil which should be abolished by law.

I happen to be a sane and reasonable man. I admire great music. The piano, the harp, brass instruments, and even the base drum mean something. But the shrieking, screeching, shouting, squalling violin is not a musical instrument. No. Don't teach it in the public schools. Never teach it at all to anybody, anywhere, under any circumstances.

WHICH IS PROPER—"DOWN EAST" OR "DOWN SOUTH"?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Will you kindly inform me if it is proper to say "Going down to Nova Scotia." I come in contact with people every day who live in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, all clinging to the idea that it is proper to say "down" to Canada. Now, I live in the South myself, and certainly they live in the North. Can it possibly be "down" both north and south from Boston? If they are right, I must submit that I have something loose in my head.
